

A TARGET FOR ROBBER'S LEAD.

George Casey Robbed and Almost Killed at Hood River.

With marks of a highwayman's bullets on his neck and clothing George Casey told a thrilling story the other day at the Portland police station, says the Telegram. Casey was robbed and shot on a train at Hood River October 19th, but this was the first information the authorities had of the affair. Casey had been under treatment for his injuries at the Portland Medical Mission. He exhibited two scars in the back of his neck where the bullet had gone through the flesh. He also showed an injury on his throat where the highwayman had held the revolver so close in trying to kill Casey that the powder had burned an ugly hole. Through Casey's coat were holes where the third bullet whizzed past his stomach.

According to the narrative of Casey, he was returning to Sacramento via Portland from the Palouse country, where he had been working in the harvest fields. At The Dalles he changed a $20 piece and placed $19.40 in his purse, which he concealed in his inside pocket. With a one-armed man Casey found a snug berth in a refrigerator car and started on the ride to Portland.

At Hood River Casey left the refrigerator car, as it was too warm, and scrambled to the top of an ordinary freight car. As he sat on the roof he saw a stranger about his own size climb up the side of the car. Reaching Casey's perch the stranger pulled a revolver—Casey thinks it was the "pepper box" variety—and ordered hands up. As if he knew what he was after the highwayman snatched Casey's hand into the very pocket where Casey's purse was concealed. A watch the victim wore was not molested because the robber did not search after finding the purse.

Having taken the money the highwayman ordered Casey to walk over the roofs of three cars to the refrigerator car and then commanded him to get down. Casey was afraid and thought the robber might force him to jump from the train when it was running or even kill him if he entered the refrigerator again. These thoughts spurred the victim to fight and he tried to throw the robber from the top of the car. The highwayman was sturdy and the strength of Casey was unequal to the task.

Another order was given to scramble into the car and when Casey refused his assailant shot at him, pointing the revolver at Casey's stomach. Casey knocked the weapon aside just in time to save himself and send the lead through the folds of his coat. The second shot passed over the victim's shoulder, but the powder burned his throat. The third shot missed Casey completely and the fourth bullet perforated the back of his neck. After the shooting the highwayman jumped from the train and disappeared, the train crew arriving soon afterward.

Since Casey's recovery he has been searching for his assailant in the Bad Lands of Portland, but without success. He gave a good description of the highwayman to the Portland police.

SCARCITY OF BEEF

In a Few Years Only the Wealthy Can Buy It—So Say Western Stockmen.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—According to information received at the headquarters of the National Livestock Association in this city. Congress will have the Western public land situation brought to its attention this winter in a new and startling manner. A number of prominent cattlemen of the West, who have been quietly investigating, are prepared to show that during the past five years there has been an enormous decrease in the number of cattle in this country, a decrease which seriously threatens the beef food supply, and that, unless speedy action be taken by congress, in the course of a very few years beef will be selling at such fabulous prices that only the wealthy can afford to indulge in the luxury of a beefsteak.

The cause of this rapid decline in the number of beef cattle is said to be due solely to the contraction of the Western public grazing lands and the increase in the consumptive demand. The rapid settlement of the West has caused the ranges left to become crowded, and this crowded condition has prevented the reseeded of grasses, and consequently millions of acres of once good pasture have been turned into absolute desert. Most of the large herds have been dispersed and slaughtered, and the bulk of the cattle supply is now being furnished by the small stockmen, but the evolution from the large herds on the open range to the small herds in pastures is too slow, owing to unfavorable land conditions, and where a few years ago the markets were supplied with cattle four, five and six years old, even yearlings are being slaughtered to make up the supply of beef.
