ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS AND THEIR STORY.

Eight miles west of the Nile and one hundred and twenty miles south of Cairo, among the ruins of an ancient Greek city, were found not long ago, by Doctors Grenfell and Hunt of the Egypt Exploration Fund, great numbers of early papyrus manuscripts. These appear to have been is the windom of the advocates of "dumped" with the litter of registry the gold standard justified. offices and monastic cloisters, and the dry climate of Egypt preserved them contains the first seven verses of the epistle to the Romans, with such errors of spelling and crudities of hand as betray the tyro in penmanship and suggest the thought that it is part of a writing exercise It was written being assigned practice pages of bible Greek. This curious scrap of one of Paul's epistles, with its history, is evidence that at the time it was penned, possibly in the reign of Constantine, about 316 were common literature. No other manuscript of St. Paul's writings has been found so ancient as this. field men of the Egypt Exploration Trial bottles free. Fund discovered other scripture fragments, one of which indirectly settles a disputed date in the second chapter of St. Luke's gospel. A torn leal, on which eighteen verses of the first chapter of Matthew are legible, bears evidence of being one of the oldest manuscript fragments of the New Testament yet foundpossibly not later than the early part original writings of the apostles and evangelists themselves must have been still accessible, and it is even possible that hundreds were yet alive who had seen the last of the apostles.

Thus the evidence accumulates overwhelmingly that with the Gospels and Epistles forming the established literature of a time closely following old patrons, as well as new ones. n5-iw the lives of their authors-whatever men may think of the writings themselves or of Him whose life and teaching they portray-it is imposteaching they portray—it is impos-best preparations for cleaning the sible to conceive that these writings were the inventions of a later age, or Price, 25 and 50 cents a bottle, at Frazer'e that the story they tell is largely the barber shop, The Dalles. credulous accretions that ignorance and superstition, in the lapse of time, added to the original.

While passing through Baker City the other day on his way East, Senator Mitchell announced to a few friends who met him at the railroad station that one of the first things he proposed doing when congress convenes is to introduce a bill to create a new federal judicial district with headquarters at Baker City and comprising as much of Eastern Oregon as may be deemed tributary to that place. The object of the movement is the convenience of those who have at present to travel 300 to 400 miles to attend the federal court at Portland. Speaking of this inconvenience the Baker City Republican cites the case of some Sumpter timbermen, who were arrested for the alleged violation of the timber laws and who were practically ruined financially by the expense of getting their witnesses to Portland. The establishment of the new district would mean another federal judge, United States marshal and district attorney, and other court officials.
