SUBMARINE BOAT HAD AN ACCIDENT

Owners of the Fulton Now Trying to Raise Her—Craft Sank in Fifteen Feet of Water.

New York, Dec. 11.—Efforts are being made to raise the submarine boat Fulton, of the Holland Torpedo Boat Company, which it was intended to send to Washington on Friday, for experimental tests, but which sank recently at her pier at New Suffolk, L. I., through an accident. The boat went down almost at the same spot where she underwent her fifteen hours' test under water about two weeks ago.

The accident happened while her commander, Captain Cable, was in New York, on account of the illness of his wife. In order to repair an exhaust valve the crew raised the stern of the Fulton under a derrick in the air. One of the forward hatches had been left open, and as the stern was raised and the bow submerged the craft filled with water. By the time the stern was lowered the boat sank in about fifteen feet of water. It is expected that within twenty-four hours the boat will again be afloat.

At the offices of Isaac L. Rice, president of the company, it is stated that in view of the fact that the work of re-floating the boat has been begun so soon, it is thought that the damage from salt water to the delicate iron and steel machinery will not amount to anything, owing to the short duration of the exposure of the machinery to the water. A force of twenty men will be put to work on the Fulton to clean and oil her parts as soon as she is afloat and put her in shape for her sea trip to Washington, in company with a convoy of the company's vessels.

In the event of any part of the Fulton having been irreparably damaged, the company will use a duplicate part from the Adder, her sister ship, now being built for her sea trip to Washington, battery, with which she is propelled, will probably have to be replaced. As soon as Captain Cable reaches New Suffolk it will probably be known how soon the boat will be able to go to Washington.

SLOWLY STARVED TO DEATH

University of Washington Student
Perished in Seattle, With His Wife and Babe by His Side.

SEATTLE, Wash., Dec. 10.—Without a friend at his bedside save his faithful wife and innocent babe, without covering enough to keep warm the blood freezing in his veins, without the direst necessities of life, Ernest Demond, a university student, died in this city a few days ago. His wife, too proud to ask for help from her friends, watched her husband waste away until finally, fearing that death might claim her loved one, she gave the alarm to the neighbors. It was too late, however, to save the dying man, and when a physician was called he knew at a glance that death had won a victory. His wife, frenzied with grief, and the 2 year old babe, were taken in charge by friends. University students buried the man whom many knew only as a passing face.

Born in one of the eastern states, Ernest Demond came five years ago with his relatives to eastern Washington. There he resided for some time, engaged in teaching and other occupations. His brothers and sisters also obtained employment there, his oldest brother being at this time a teacher in the Dayton schools. Ernest met a beautiful young woman, with whom he fell in love. They married. Then came his desire to obtain an education. He matriculated at the state university in the fall of 1898. For a time the couple lived over a store at Latona, while both took work at the university. This lasted until the money was exhausted. A baby was born. Doctor bills and druggist bills came. The young man manfully struggled to keep out of debt and still keep up his work.

His quiet unobtrusive ways made him disliked by a certain class at the college, and one night in a class room a gang of preparatory students caught him, clipped his hair short on one side and then abused him. He took it in good part, but the action grieved him. He continued his life of toil, working

A. M. WILLIAMS & CO.

He continued his life of toil, working during the day and studying at night, until the strain became too great and a sickness ensued which resulted in his death. Too late did his fellow students realize the courage, ambition and high purpose of his life. The faculty and students are now stirred up over his death and are raising a fund known as the Demond fund to be invested as agreed upon by the widow and a faculty committee.

Attractive Women.
All women sensibly desire to be attractive. Beauty is the stamp of health because it is the outward manifestation of inner purity. A healthy woman is always attractive, bright and happy. When every drop of blood in the veins is pure a beautiful flush is on the cheek. But when the blood is impure, incourtesy, bad temper and a sallow complexion tell the tale of sickness all to plainly. And women today know there is no beauty without health. Winsor of Cardinal crows women with beauty and attractiveness by making strong and healthy those organs which make her a woman. Try Winsor of Cardinal, and in a month your friends will hardly know you.
