WORLD IS DEPENDENT

America cannot live to herself alone. This nation might will to do so. This nation might reason that it was absolutely self-supporting and dependent only upon the several states.

But about the time that America had analyzed the situation of being a hermit and proved to the entire satisfaction of the peoples that the plan was not only feasible but wise — well something would happen away over on the other side of the globe in which we as a nation have absolutely no interest to convince us as a nation that the good of the world is our good and misfortune of other nations directly react upon us as a nation and as individuals.

The world nations are inter-dependent. They are becoming more so. Transportation, ship, rail and air, is cutting down distance as if by miracle and as a result nations are nearer each other than ever before.

Naturally you wouldn't think that the southern states of the United States would be vitally affected by the monsoons over in India. It doesn't seem reasonable. Nor would you believe that the demoralization of the rupee, India's standard coin, would very greatly affect the United States. That is an internal affair affecting India solely, you say.

But the monsoon, that is the rainy season, which strikes India was in different this year. Crops did not prosper and mature as they should. India's 315,000,000 inhabitants didn't make money.

These people of India are the heaviest purchasers of cotton goods in all the world, according to the Commerce Monthly of the National Bank of Commerce in New York City.

Under normal conditions British mills take about one fourth of the American cotton crop. The inability of India to buy cotton because of crop failures and the demoralized rupee prevented England selling cotton goods to India. England unable to sell cotton goods, refused to buy American cotton.

Of course general trade conditions throughout the world have played a part in the inability of the southern planters to sell the cotton crop. India's plight is made worse by her inability to dispose of products of that land.

But the fact stands out that because the monsoon was a partial failure over in India, American cotton is a drug on the market and England's textile mills are idle.

We are prone to boast of independence. It is a noble principle. But we are not independent in the largest sense of the word. We are dependent upon the other nations of the world and they upon us.

The lack of rain over in India plunges the cotton market of the United States into such gloom that mourning weeds would be in keeping with the mental outlook of the southern states just now.

GOODNESS PREDOMINATES

Her mother was grievously ill. She must submit to an operation if her life was to be saved. To pay for surgical skill would require $1000. The family bank account was woefully depleted.

Then Miss Dorothy Miller, 16 year old girl of Trenton, N. J., sent forth an announcement that she would marry any white man of refinement who was willing to advance $1000 so that her mother might undergo the operation.

It is refreshing to note that this girl was willing to sacrifice herself her happiness, everything, that her mother might live. In this age of jazz when girls in a few instances are not considerate of their mothers, it is pleasing to find Dorothy Millers who proves that life after all is good and that love of daughter for mother is so tremendous and compelling as to blot out all other considerations.

In answer to the girl's proposition a wealthy man in St. Paul, Minn., notified the girl he was sending her a certified check for $1000. He further stated that Dorothy would not have to marry him to get the check cashed.

Again, the inherent goodness in men is exemplified. Although this rich man could have taken advantage of the girl's predicament to marry her, he refused to use such cave-man tactics. All he knew or wanted to know was that a girl who loved her mother dearly was in dire need. He supplied that need.

The whole case cries aloud that goodness is prevalent and that we think the world is going to pot, largely because that sort of exceptional thing is featured in the news.

U. S. SPENDS MORE FOR LUXURIES THAN EDUCATION

By United Press WASHINGTON, April 1 — More money was spent for luxuries in the United States in 1920 than was expended on education in the entire history of the country according to figures today in the office of Dr. P. P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education.

The total spent on luxuries in 1920 was $22,700,000,000. In 1918, the country spent $919,729,258 for elementary and higher education. From the beginning of American history and until 1920, a grand total of $16,645,000,000 was devoted to education.

Included in the figures are items for public education, elementary and secondary, normal schools for the training of teachers, colleges, universities and professional and technical schools, whether supported by public taxation or privately owned. Salaries for teachers, cost of buildings, upkeep and equipment also are included in the total.

Completed figures for 1918 show that instructors in all of our schools received salaries totaling $492,745,240.

Here is how the luxury budget of Uncle Sam looks: For face powder, cosmetics, perfume, etc. $ 750,000,000 Furs 300,000,000 Soft drinks 350,000,000 Toilet soaps 400,000,000 Cigarettes 800,000,000 Cigars 510,000,000 Tobacco and snuff 800,000,000 Jewelry 500,000,000 Chewing gum 50,000,000 Ice cream 250,000,000 Luxurious service 3,000,000,000 Joy rides, pleasure resorts and races 3,000,000,000 Clayton pointed out that the people of the United States blew away in smoke of cigars and cigarettes $300,000,000 more than was spent on all forms of education in 1918, while the total cost of in all forms of tobacco in 1920 was five times the total of teachers' salaries in 1918. If the people who smoke and chew would only take two smokes in the place of three, and two chews in the place of three chews, and devote the money thus saved to support the schools, the salaries of all teachers could be increased by more than 120 per cent, he said.

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN IN COMMUNITY GAMES

Captain T. G. Cook and W. H. Arbury, active in Community Service work, last night organized a 14 team baseball league of business men at the high school gymnasium.

The swimming tank is being cleaned and prepared for the filling to accommodate a swimming class which will be organized Monday evening. If enough interest is manifested instructors will be secured for a "learn to swim" week.

The girls' reserve corps are active in recreative games.

A hike, for adults, is being planned for Sunday afternoon. The party will leave the Black and White cafe at 2:30 o'clock. Everybody is invited to go.

Captain Cook's short stay in The Dalles, in the interest of Community Service is preparatory to the putting on of an institute school here at a later date, when he can be cured for a two week's period to develop local leaders for the work.

Indoor baseball is one of the initial steps of the recreation work. Any other activity wanted will be initiated as called for. The interest shown argues well for the future development of this line of work.

MRS. STILLMAN'S

The court ruled that Mrs Stillman's "hysterical" letter to her husband, said to form the chief basis for the latter's charge that two-year-old Guy Stillman is the son of Fred Beauvais, French-Canadian guide, is "inadmissible." It was also decided that the five letters Beauvais is alleged to have written to Mrs. Stillman after Guy's birth in which he is said to have referred to "our child" were privileged.

As a consequence these letters cannot be made public by the court at this time, as they are not connected with Mrs. Stillman's motion for additional alimony and counsel fees.

Morschauser emphasized that his ruling today was confined solely to the alimony motion. This left the implication that the letter may be published later, when the divorce suit proper is resumed.

BOOZE SMUGGLING

Several other amateur chemists expressed a desire to conduct an analysis, but the police were content with Dr. Thompson's decision.

Taken before Police Judge D. L. Cates last yesterday afternoon, Jones was fined $65 and his trunk, a "common carrier," confiscated, together with the whiskey, valued at $580 at the current local market quotation.

Jones had been coming to The Dalles weekly and supplying a select clientele with the Canadian whiskey, the police believe.

FOR YOU--A NEW PHARMACY DEVOTED TO YOUR SERVICE OPENS TOMORROW MORNING SERVICE!

We want that one word to picture for you the ideal of this new drug store—the ideal to which we shall hold under all circumstances—in every transaction, large or small.

We intend that this shall be a store for all the people—a store to which man, woman or child may come in the assurance of sincere, interested service—service with promptness, with courtesy, with fidelity to our best conception of the wishes of those who honor us with their confidence and their patronage.

Certain it is that the measure of our success can be no greater than the measure of our service.

WE MEAN TO SUCCEED!

So, then, we invite our friends; our enemies, if any there be (for we would make friends of them); the residents of our city and its environs; the citizens of our county, and all who pass our doors—to pause and enter, that they may test whether or not we know the meaning of the word we have deliberately chosen as our ideal—SERVICE!

It is not necessary—you do not expect—that we shall here tell you what this new drug store has to offer you. We have everything that such a store should have—nothing, we hope, that it should not have.
