

COMMUNITY RECREATION

What is the meaning of Community Recreation? Of what use is it to the public?

Webster states, the definition of the word community is, common possession or enjoyment; participation; a body of people having common interests or privileges; society at large; the public.

The word recreation is defined as the act of recreating or state of being recreated; that which refreshes the energies or spirit; amusement; sport; diversion.

The connecting link between community recreation and people, and its proper function? Eugene T. Lies of the Chicago Community Service very aptly covers it in his statement that Community Service is trying to take the "wreck" out of recreation and put the unity in community.

Community Service tries to recreate, giving fresh life to; reanimate as it were; reinvigorate, giving relief to labor, and especially to the laborers.

There is scarcely a word in the vocabulary of Community Service that is not two-fold in its purpose. Namely, emphasize the "use in amuse; remove the "dust" from industrial and so on.

How many of the average business men and women, during these strenuous days, the aftermath of the world's greatest war, take time for a little recreation? Very few, and they have almost forgotten how to play. In these busy days of the mad rush and unceasing efforts to accumulate enough of the coin of the realm to meet the H. C. of L., everything else is forgotten.

Occasionally you meet the individual, who, realizing the value of wholesome recreation, starts his day with an hour of golf before going to the office.

The result, an excellent illustration of Oliver Wendell Holmes' famous quotation, "Far better to be 70 years young than 40 years old." The man with the 38-inch chest and 32-inch waist, having been accustomed to an out-of-door life or engaged in an occupation requiring considerable energy and development of the physical side, changes to the swivel chair position or a sedentary life.

"Oh You American"—our allies' impression of the American soldier. The English exclaimed, "Those crazy Americans," while the French remarked, "The wonderful Yankee."

A celebrated French officer at Camp Lewis early in 1917, witnessing for the first time a football game between rival regimental teams, remarked to the writer, "Do all the American soldiers play football like this?" When answered in the affirmative, he raised his arms, and pointing in the direction of Germany, exclaimed, "When these boys get over there, God help the kaiser." Little did we realize the significance of his remark at this time.

The keynote of the system of physical training and recreation adopted by the United States army can be summed up in three short paragraphs, namely:

(a) Strengthening of the entire body; general health and organic vigor.

(b) The development of endurance and fortitude. Ability to withstand hardships and privations.

(c) Stimulation of the mental powers; rapid assimilation of general instruction.

The American public have but recently awakened to this widespread unfitness and the draft statistics which showed one third of our young men called unfit for active service. Hence the nationwide movement toward the betterment of these conditions.

Many of the states (19 at this time) having compulsory physical training laws, take care of the boys and girls, while the young men and women of the colleges and universities are well equipped in this respect. But what of the vast army of the employed, who have neither the time nor the inclination to take up this work. What are we going to do for them?

Taking care of the leisure time, when the people are not eating or sleeping is the problem, and although America at this time is passing through an era of being "highly organized," recreation, individual, community and nation as a whole has never been so needed by the people, for the people as at the present time.

TARIFF AND TAXATION TO HAVE RIGHT-OF-WAY

By John Gleasoner (United News Staff Correspondent)

(WASHINGTON, April 5)—Tariff and taxation are to have right of way in the special session of congress which convenes April 11.

Leaders expect to enact the Fordney emergency tariff bill, vetoed by President Wilson at the last session, without delay.

The anti-dumping and American valuation measures may be made a part of it so there will be one bill instead of three. This, it is argued, would make for speed.

Then attention will be given to tax revision and enactment of a permanent tariff. Measures will be ready for consideration of congress by August, according to Senator Penrose.

The permanent tariff will greatly increase duties. On the question of taxation, there is agreement that the excess profits tax shall be eliminated and sur-taxes lowered to the "collection point."

What new taxes will be devised remains uncertain, and the question promises to be one on which there will be much debate. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is compiling suggestions on tax measures for the information of leaders.

Other important domestic legislation includes passage of the army and navy appropriation bills, which failed during the last session.

A fight is in prospect on both. The army bill will involve debate on the size of the army. The navy bill providing for continuation of the 1916 construction program, will meet hostility from advocates of armament limitation, and from those who believe it is a waste of money to construct capital ships because of the development of aerial and submarine warfare.

Immigration restriction is again to be considered as well as the soldier bonus bill, and federal regulation of the coal mining and meat packing industries.
