

FARM MACHINERY DROPS IN PRICE

FIRST DIRECT RESULT OF SLASH IN STEEL PRICES.

By United Press
CHICAGO, April 14.—The first effect of the slash in steel prices was felt here today when a straight 10 percent cut in prices on all farm machinery, made partly of steel, was announced by the International Harvester company.

The reduction applies chiefly to harvesting machinery, covering grain and rice binders, shockers, reapers and push machines, mowers, hay rakes, side delivery rakes, tedders, loaders, corn binders, huskers, pickers and silo fillers.

A reduction of 10 percent in prices on all farm machinery composed principally of wood and iron was announced last month by the harvester company.

The announcement said that the reduction comes in steel prices at a time when this year's product has been provided for and will have no effect on the cost of machines sold this year.

"However, it does establish a lower replacement cost," the statement said, "and serves as the basis of a price to which our customers are entitled and which we are willing to accept."

with a 4 to 0 count against them and won out from the Braves.

Ragged infield defense cost the Indians a victory to the Browns. Speaker will probably have a lot of trouble until Wamby or Lunte get back into the game. The youngsters on second and short make the infield lack balance.

Even without Groh, Roush and Kopf, the Reds were good enough to beat the Pirates. If Bohne and Fonseca play and hit all season as they did yesterday, Pat Moran won't miss the holdouts so much. Bohne got a double and a triple, and Fonseca got a single and a triple.

when the latter arrived at the apartment.

"I didn't want any fuss and noise around the place at that time of night, so I met Andrews and number two at the door," Cahill said.

"When I told them what number one had said, number two didn't want to come in, but Andrews said it was 'all right' and they went upstairs together. Number one was pretty sore but after Andrews had argued for a few minutes she consented to let number two stay there during the night without raising a rumpus.

"I told them, and Andrews, too, that one of them would have to vacate today, however."

Andrews married Augusta Haynes, a divorcee, a member of a wealthy

(New England family, at Portland, Maine, on July 17, 1912, and is said to have married Miss Esther Marie Tatnall, 25, a blonde stenographer and telephone operator, believed to be a member of a respectable Pittsburgh family, at Greenwich, Conn., last January 26. And his wife, presiding over her home in the fashionable Renasaele apartments in Jersey City, was astonished and dazed when Andrews, on arriving home at night, brought in his new mate, himself carrying her suit case, and announced that she was to share the home.

"He simply said that he loved her and that she was coming here to live," said Mrs. Andrews number one over the telephone to the United News. "He is out with this young woman—his sweetheart—now at 11:45 at night. But that is nothing unusual. They always go out in the evening while I stay here with my two little boys, the sons of Mr. Andrews.

"I don't know what I shall do. I have consulted my lawyer but whether I shall sue for a divorce I have not decided. I have to remain here temporarily, even under these circumstances because I have nowhere to go and take our children.

"I certainly am not friendly with this young woman but I would hesitate to give an opinion of her because I realize that I am prejudiced against her."

Mrs. Andrews number one is said to have betaken herself to a small alcove bed chamber for detachment from the strange romance that was being enacted. She had hopes at first she said, that the affection between her husband and the younger woman would prove to be but a passing infatuation.

"But it grows," she admitted, in a tone of resignation, "and I have no more hope."

Each wife is said to have her own automobile and the two children, John, six, and Harley, eight, are believed to be on terms of guileless friendship with the woman who has supplanted their mother in the heart of their father. Harley is a cripple but is retaining the use of his limbs.

Andrews is quoted as explaining that he went through a marriage ceremony with his supposed first wife, but he did not actually marry her because of some technicality, the nature of which he would not reveal. The second wife apparently felt secure in her position on account of the same belief in the technicality.

AMNESTY FOR POLITICAL CRIME AWAITS WAR END

By United News
WASHINGTON, April 14—Government action looking to general amnesty for political prisoners probably will await establishment of the declaratory peace with Germany.

This attitude of the administration was indicated Thursday after a delegation from the political amnesty committee had called at the White House to urge President Harding to exercise clemency.

Morris Hillquist, prominent socialist, said the president received the declaration cordially, and that they felt encouraged to believe the case of every individual is being given consideration.

"We are appealing for justice in behalf of victims of a morbid and abnormal political situation," Hillquist told the president.

"We are not invoking clemency or favors for criminals. The men and women whose cause we are pleading have committed no offense against the person or property of their fellow men."

The delegates paraded to the capitol later in the day wearing arm bands marked, "amnesty." They presented a petition to Vice President Coolidge reading "amnesty" signed 300,000 people.

A special deputation of lawyers which called on attorney general Daugherty was informed that the department of justice was inclined to leniency.

PARENT-TEACHERS

lives; but all have eventful lives," said Kirk. "I believe that a ballot of all teachers in the nation would show that 95 percent of the teachers are against Parent Teachers' associations.

"Quite often these associations start with the best intentions upon the part of the parent members. But soon interest dies out and other persons, perhaps not so desirable as members, gain control of the work of the association. We have instances on record where such associations have been used for political purposes, such as the election of aldermen or city councilmen."

Digressing from his topic, Superintendent Kirk took occasion to take a verbal rap at the "so-called modern institution; the home."

"What has become of the home; the good, old-fashioned home of our younger days?" he continued. "It seems to me that the majority of the present homes are nothing more than a place for our boys and girls to eat and sleep in. Our children are so used to staying away from home for the greater portion of the time that we may soon have a race of people who can't stay at home."

Night practice for school plays, debates and other school activities, combined with the influence of motion picture shows, and pool halls, were given by Kirk as a few of the many things which are occupying the mind of the younger generation, to the exclusion of the home.

With organization work completed, the following officers of The Dalles Parent Teachers' association were elected: Mrs. J. Minor Booth, president; Mrs. L. A. Duncan, vice-president; Mrs. John Van Dellen, secretary; Mrs. J. B. Kirk, treasurer.

Another meeting will be held in the near future, it was decided.

facilitate the admission of Russian deportees, but that a mutual repatriation might be arranged, which would permit the release of Americans who are being detained in Russia.

While no decision has been reached yet at the state department the situation is receiving the closest consideration because of the several important problems it involved.

In some quarters the soviet action in closing the Russian frontier and following with the suggestion that representatives of the two countries, "discuss" the situation, is interpreted as a move to obtain some gesture of recognition from the American government.

Officials admitted that the matter of deportation had become particularly perplexing as a result of the soviet ruling closing the border. The sailing of a ship from New York, intended to carry more than a hundred Russians back into soviet land had been postponed on orders from the department of labor, because of the uncertainty as to how to dispose of the Russians, once they were landed in Europe. It has been suggested that the Russians could be deported in Estonia, Latvia or other states adjacent to soviet Russia, but should these countries decline to receive the deported bolsheviks, an embarrassing situation might be created for the United States.

This government, as one official explained, is in a position of having its deportees "all dressed up and no place to go."

Because of its relation to the plight of Americans imprisoned in Russia, the situation is attracting added attention. About 20 Americans are held in Russia, in varying degrees of confinement. One of them, Lieutenant Emmet Kilpatrick, a Red Cross officer, was reported recently to have been sentenced to life imprisonment. Others, according to reports are being held in solitary confinement, under almost intolerable conditions and with scanty food supplies.

Past efforts by the state department to secure their release through Scandinavian officials have failed, the bolsheviks taking an attitude which seemed to demand direct negotiations. Under the old administration the state department declined to enter into any such direct contact, apparently on the theory that to deal directly with the soviet authorities might imply recognition.

State department officials are still studying the question but it was pointed out that in view of Secretary Hughes' recent statement declining to trade with Russia, and announcing America's attitude, negotiations for the exchange of nationals could scarcely be interpreted as a change in American policy.
