

New York Letter

NEW YORK, April 25.—There is a complete epidemic of bigamy raging in greater New York this spring; a veritable bigamy wave. It is growing a bit late to blame it on the war, and so the probabilities are that statisticians will come forward explaining how the new prohibition enforcement laws are responsible—the police are so busy smelling corks that they haven't time to keep cases on the engagement and marriage columns. Anyhow, aside from the much-discussed Andrews menage, there have broken into the light of publicity within the last few days, Roscoe Reich, who admits having two living and attached-to-him wives, and having two former ones, one dead and the other divorced; William Mayer, who joyfully explained that not only has he two but that he is equally devoted to them and considers them the two best women in the world; and most unique of all, perhaps, Irving Manheimer, who annoyed his wife by asking her to tell a wealthy young girl, whom he wanted to marry, that she was just a "friend of his." She was always glad to do anything she could for her family, including her husband, but she didn't feel that was just the thing to be asked.

"I just went away to get a job and make a living for myself." This was the statement made by eleven-year-old Raymond Molony, who was found helping the station master at Sound Beach, Staten Island, after his parents and the police had been conducting a city-wide search for him.

The latest thrill in society is the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet; this being one of the new reversals of the old-time arrangement whereby wealthy American girls married titled Europeans. The much-sought-after "Bob" Goelet has recently become the husband of the Princess Riabouchinsky, famous throughout Europe for her beauty and charm, and evidently glad to get a nice short name even at the expense of the "Princess."

A new Bernard Shaw book, which purports to be the dynamic author's scientific, religious and political soul-disclosure, is announced by Bretano's for early publication. That sounds like a rather large field, but when Shaw starts out to disclose even his own ideas, he is able to do it sweepingly. In form, the new book is a play in five acts, but every act is complete in itself, and every-one contains Shavianism in concentrated form. It will have the most general appeal of anything produced recently from Shaw's mind and temperament.

Wood-sawing is the favored pastime of the moment with a whole galaxy of ambitious Gotham women. Not at all in response to the example of the woodchopper of Amerotogen, but because they've learned that it leads to a supple waistline. If you see a middle-aged, stoutish woman, who never theless is managing a youthful sway to her body, you may know there's a little woodpile in her cellar.

Women are chivalrous, particularly to their own sex. It is no uncommon sight to see a young girl get up and offer her seat in the subway to an elderly woman whose entrance has been ignored by the male passengers; but I saw the real climax of this age the other evening at dinnertime in a popular tea-room. A conventional-looking middle-aged woman took a seat at the same table with one of her own sex, a stranger to her, and on finishing dinner politely inquired, "Do you mind if I smoke?"

The recent cold snap, coming on top of summer weather, played hob with a wood many suburban gardens. Pet fruit trees suffered grievously from frost bite. But one Westchester commuter solved his problems of that kind for all time. Directly in front of his dining room window is a prize peach tree, all in blossom. The proud owner felt the chill blast approaching and he attached an extra long cord to the household's electric toaster and carried it out through the window to the peach tree, fixing it as close as possible to the young branches. It was left with the current on all night and the tree was saved.

New York is having a chance to inspect a complete and authenticated set of the famous little secret paper, "La Libre Belgique," which was printed in Belgium during the three years that country was occupied by the German army. Many individual copies have been over here before, but never before a complete file. There are only four sets in existence. This one was originally bought by M. Zeegar, of Brussels, and is only being exhibited here.

NEW YORK, April 25.—The massed array of witnesses of the two sides of the Stillman divorce case would make up a very good musical comedy of the sort where no expense is spared in the chorus effects. Simple Indian and pioneer from the Canadian forests will be offset by bospangled chorus girls of Broadway, not forgetting the nautical division from the good ship Modesty. Mr. Stillman's yacht. The available array includes astrologers, bell boys, maid servants, apartment house superintendents, and others too numerous to particularize, who would just be listed on the program as "ladies and gentlemen of the ensemble," or maybe, "jeomanry."

There's a terrible shock awaiting any visitor to the city from far away who goes down to see the excitement in the stock exchange these days. We've grown so accustomed to thinking of it as a place of hectic clamorings and chaos in which coats and collars are torn asunder that it is sort of like stepping into the hush of a library to go into the exchange these days. The brokers have taken to checkers to keep awake, some of them, while others spend the time comparing golf records. Some livelier souls discovered that dice are helpful in whiling away the silent hours, but the governors' reminded them that gambling is prohibited—of course—within the precincts of the stock exchange. There is nothing else to do. The frenzied public refuses to be come frenzied right now about stocks. So do the brokers. The only excitement the floor has seen in several days—or pretty nearly weeks—took place the other morning when one of the youthful members conceived a happy thought of livening up a new ticker arrangement. It is a transparent globe of water, with the ticker running back of it, the numerals being so magnified by the water that the can be read twenty feet away. It looked so much like a goldfish bowl that the lightsome one dropped some pretty little fishes in it and almost upset business. But most of the time now the exchange is just about like the U. S. senate during a nice long speech.

Anna Sabata, who decided that she would become a movie star rather than a waitress, got back her $40 paid for the lessons which were to be, the open sesame to film fame. Miss Sabata appeared in court as complainant against George R. Cole, who had inserted the advertisement which lured the $40 from her savings bank. She had been promised, Miss Sabata declared, a position which would enable her to ride in a limousine. Instead, she had only been taught to recite "On Our Wedding Day," and she was still a waitress. She offered to recite it for the court, but before she got through, it was decided that the evidence was sufficient evidence to get $40 back.

It did seem a trifle like rubbing it in, to some of New York City's state income tax payers this year. Not only did it have to be paid and minus some of the federal exemption—but they had to walk into the room which used to be the Cafe Savarian bar, to pay it. "I mailed mine," one heavy taxpayer was explaining on the bus, "just because I could not bear to walk into that room and see it all filled up with desks and clerks and people taking money—and not passing out what I used to get there in return for it."
