SCAMPERING MICE

If this story has a moral, it is, don't fall ill of smallpox or diphtheria in The Dalles.

Here is a graphic tale told good naturedly by a recent patient of the isolation ward up back of the Historical society building on the bluff south of the city:

"One word describes the place, mice, lots of mice, little mice and big mice, all scampering playfully, all so hungry that they'd eat anything.

"In the night time when I dozed off, they'd come out and caress my ears tenderly. Scamper, scamper sounded the music of their scurrying feet.

"The second night I was there, the mice changed their attack. They wanted to nibble at my pink toes. I had to unroll the bed almost continuously to guard my pedal extremities.

"Coupled with the invasion of mice, the water on the outside of the house, the toilet on the outside and the general unsanitary condition of the place added to my interest."

The city has tried to secure another isolation ward. Money was voted for the purchase of a house across the tracks from the Libby, McNeill & Libby cannery.

The city is alert to secure some other isolation ward. The mayor and the council and the city health officer fully realize that the present shack is no fit place for a well person, to say nothing of an ill one.

In the meantime one will do well not to contract smallpox or diphtheria.

MOST CONTEMPTIBLE

We nominate for the meanest, most contemptible person in the world, the fellow who takes his grudge against parents out upon their innocent children.

Children are not responsible for what their parents do. Indeed because one differs with grown men and women, should be no cause for venting spite against them.

Everyone is entitled to his or her opinion. Everyone has built up his or her viewpoint out of his or her own experiences. If you are mentally developed at all, you'll have charity for the other fellow.

Back of every wrong act of the other fellow is a long chain of circumstances which explains why he did the wrong thing at the wrong time.

Perhaps the mistake which the other fellow made developed his nature to a state where he will not commit the breach of conduct again.

But even if the parents or parent should come in for censure, their or his children should not. They are little lives in themselves. Each possesses a separate soul, a bit of God.

Why then should you make an innocent child suffer for a wrong, real or fancied, in the committing of which the child had absolutely no part. How foolish it is.

Little children are like tender flowers. They cannot be cruelly or spitefully dealt with unless they are broken a bit by the rough usage.

any more than a flower can withstand the crunching of a strong shoe — without being bruised and broken in its dainty petals.

We nominate for the meanest, most contemptible person in the world, the fellow who takes his grudge against parents out upon their innocent children.

Of course he's safe in doing this, the coward, because little children don't fight back, can't fight back. Usually they don't comprehend what it's all about.

But the fellow who strikes at parents through tender children is so much lower than a crawling fuzzy worm or a malaria-carrying mosquito that it would take him two million years of steady climbing to attain the level of the commonly considered lower forms of life.

LOOKING BACKWARD

(From The Chronicle, May 12, 1896.) A marriage license was issued in the clerk's office yesterday to William Kennedy and Fanny A. Ordway.

A very pleasant birthday surprise party was given Miss Grace Glenn and Misses Effie and Vesta Bolton last evening.

Those present other than the hostesses were: Grace Hobson, Maie Barnett, Lena Thompson, Jennie Young, Maude Gilbert, Maude Kuhn, Martha Schooling, Lena Liebe, Hattie Cram, Sibyl Cushing, Edie Fisher, Edna Van Duyn, Jake McCowan, Will Mickelback, Chris. Schwabe, Archie Barnett, Charles Schmidt, John Fritz, George Weigel, Clarence Gilbert, Roy Grimes, Charles Campbell, Victor Sampson, Alfred Barzee, Leo Newman.

Mrs. Newman left this morning for Hanford, Cal.

Mrs. A. Henderson of this city went to White Salmon this morning on a visit.

Mrs. John Wood, wife of the butcher, went to Santa Rosa, Cal., today on a visit to relatives.
