NEW YORK'S BLIND HAVE REAL VACATIONS

By United Press. NEW YORK, May 26.—The blind people of New York City are getting ready for their summer vacations. Perched high above the gleaming river at Cornwall-on-Hudson, in the midst of eight acres of richest Orange County farm land, stands a big old-fashioned house with broad veranda.

It is called the River Lighthouse and is the playground of the sightless, maintained by the New York Association for the Blind.

Beginning June 15, groups of blind persons are conducted there by sighted guides for 12 day visits throughout the summer.

The River Lighthouse is one of four projects maintained by the New York Association for the Blind. There are also the Bourns workshop for men, the Boarding house for Men and the Lighthouse, an industrial school for adult blind. President Harding, on a recent visit to New York, took time to view the "lighthouse" and is honorary chairman of a committee seeking a $2,000,000 endowment for the work.

SCRIBES OF HIGH SCHOOLS ORGANIZE

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, May 26.—Myrtle Carlson, representing the "Steelhead," one of the Student publications of The Dalles high school, was a delegate at the first annual convention of high school editors held at the school of journalism at the university, Friday morning, May 20. She was elected temporary secretary-treasurer and vice-president for the rest of the present school year.

There were in all 42 delegates, representing 22 high schools. An Oregon high school press association was formed; a constitution adopted; officers and committees elected for the coming year; and an annual meeting date at the school of journalism set for each year at the time of meeting of the high school debate league.

High school annuals, magazines, news notes and newspapers are the four classes of high school publications entitled to representation. Every person and publication accepting membership in the association, subscribed to the following principles of journalistic ethics:

1. I believe in clean journalism.
2. I will put nothing into print as a writer or editor that I would not say as a gentleman.
3. I will publish nothing anonymous to which I would be ashamed to sign my name.
4. Realizing that journalism is powerful, I shall devote extreme care to my writing and editing. Realizing that the printed word cannot be recalled or unsaid, I shall watch carefully to prevent the printing of any thing untrue, anything untrue, or anything harmful to the good name of any person, or the reputation of a school.

Weight of Loaf Is Weighty Problem for Science Group

By Ralph H. Turner. United News Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, May 26.—On the outskirts of Washington, where the bureau of standards has removed itself from the annoyances of downtown political life, a group of scientists, aided by a few major bakers, is wrestling with the question: "Should the American housewife, when she buys a loaf of bread, be guaranteed the weight of that loaf? and if so, how?"

The reason for it all is the fourteenth annual conference on weights and measures. Bread weight legislation is but one phase of the conference but no other topic is arousing greater discussion.

The trouble seems to be that while the bread loaf can be standardized as to weight, no system has been devised for insuring the quality of the daily bread.

Speaking from the bakers' standpoint, H. E. Barnard, director of the American Institute of Baking, explained: "The consumer can get a pound of alleged bread which will do her absolutely no good, or she can get the same weight of the most nourishing food in the world. Between these extremes there are innumerable variations, for which no system of accurate standards has ever been devised."

This view was supported by William F. Chert, inspector of weights and measures in Chicago. Chert pointed out that while nearly every state legislature was attempting to regulate the weight of a bread loaf, oven-baked, 12 hours after baking—very few in year, according to the department of the college. There have been many winners of contests this year.
