

INDIANS WALLOPED BY SCORE OF 14-4

DALLAS LOOKS FORWARD TO BIG GAMES TOMORROW AND MONDAY.

The Dalles diamond artists were victorious yesterday afternoon in a rather lopsided game with the Indians baseball team from the Warm Springs reservation. After the dust had finally cleared, Manager Fitzgerald's adding machine showed a total of 14 tallies for the locals with only 4 marked up on the job of the Indian team.

The Indian players show flashes of speed at times, but in the main showed lack of practice.

The local swaters are expecting the hardest battle of the year to tomorrow afternoon, when they take with the Harriman club team of Portland. The railroaders come to this city with a record of six straight wins and no defeats.

The Harriman club team will play two games here, one tomorrow afternoon and another Monday afternoon. Tomorrow's game will start promptly at 2:30 on the old ball field. Woolsey will occupy the box for the locals in this game. Monday's game will start at 2 o'clock. Carlson and Lawrence will do the hurling in this game, which will also be played on the old ball grounds.

MYSTERY SHIP HAS HOLD OF TREASURE

By United Press
PORTLAND, Ore., May 28.—A report on the coast of Oregon there is a mysterious old hull in which they put down the memories of the sea-faring settlers in the Oregon country.

The hull of the ancient craft contains a mass of curiosities, huge quantities of produce even gold that was not delivered until years ago. It is said that the sea-faring settlers put down the memories of the sea-faring settlers in the Oregon country.

The curious ones were then taken back by the fishermen. When the vessel had returned again, the riches of Oregon gold had melted and the wreck was all that was left.

This mystery ship was to be a vessel, residents of the Newberry area believe. They are in search of it and a number of other ships of ancient discovery. When all plans are ready the track will be turned in a few hours between sides or not at all. Hence, of the expedition depends on a green extent upon the favor of the elements. In 1910, the expedition sailing north and then the wreck is sometimes about 100 miles from the beach, and again covered with rain of sand and almost submerged from sight.

The treasure chest will endeavor to make their drive on a favorable day, when the tide is low and the wreck comparatively clear of sand. It is planned to cut through the hold with axes and shovels, and re-

SLEEPY AIR OF FRENCH BATTLE, STRANGE CONTRAST WITH FEROCIOUS APPEARANCE OF DEMPSEY, BUT SUGGESTION OF LATENT POWERS.

By William Slavens McNutt
(United News Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, May 28.—I saw Carpentier box today and after watching him work out, I wouldn't bet a nickel upon the fight either way. It's a case of the more you see the less you know. The gentleman with the inside information, the wise boys with the real dope—the one who, in the race track parlance, "talks to the horse," will probably be wrong in what in their guesses on the fight. The wise ones may learn something from watching the work out, I don't.

It was my first view of Carpentier. When he stepped into the ring in a lot back of an old barn on an isolated Long Island farm, he was shocked. He seemed a mere step of a boy. His skin was white and pink. He appeared so slim and young, fragile.

There was no hint of much latent power in the look of the Frenchman. He seemed a mere step of a boy. His skin was white and pink. He appeared so slim and young, fragile.

I had not expected to see a heavy set man. Neither had I expected to see such a pink and white stippling as he appeared to be. Certainly I had not expected to see one with such a cherubic quality of expression.

I thought of the heavy, brown-skinned, thick-lipped Dempsey with his ferocious expression, his huge arms and shoulders, his bulldog build, and shouldered. It seemed a shame that this pink and white perfection of artifice should stand before me should be submitted to the mutilation of Dempsey's sledge-hammer hands.

Italian Joe Gans clambered into the ring with him and they began to box. Italian Joe Gans looks like a fighter. He is quiet and seemingly powerful, scarred and rugged. Carpentier worked lazily. He seemed tired; bored. I could see a thing to suggest the champion. I found myself wondering how he could have obtained his present place in the fighting game, how he could be considered as an opponent for Dempsey. As a model for a fighter, wonderful. As an actor, a matinee idol? Perfect. But a fighter?

As he warmed up in his tunic with Italian Joe Gans his face became flushed. The expression changed. The cherubic quality was not so pronounced. The tired, bored look faded from the big blue eyes. A bit of rough fighting I saw the flash of an expression on the flushed face that stirred my blood. It was not the zeal of the fighting look of an angry animal, but it was a fighting expression. I'll tell the world it was an exaltation, a refinement of ferocity, a refined passion of anger. A painter could have caught that fleeting expression and fittingly fixed it upon the idealized face of a French soldier charging to certain death against the enemy. It was a flash of the fighting spirit as distinct from the primness and ease of an amateur. It was a flash and like a flash it was gone. The face was again that of a bored matinee idol secretly playing to a small audience.

But when I thought of him in the ring against the bruising Dempsey, I did not shudder. I no longer wondered how he had attained his present position in the ring. I began to look more closely at the pink and white body. I became increasingly impressed with the small boys had better steer clear of fruit orchards.

The annual report of the city has a good deal of information on the general public that they are well satisfied to identify the great many of them by small boys and writing of miscellaneous incidents of every possible kind. The city has had several years of a number of orchards north of town have been made a fruit-severing. It fruit thieves, who have not even hesitated to cut up orchards and chop down limbs laden with fruit, the orcharders point out. This year it will be a different story, however, they declare. A number of fruit growers have been sworn in as special deputy sheriffs, and arrests will be made in every instance where the orchards are caught.
