ANOTHER CHANCE TO HELP

Persons interested in the passage of The Dalles-Columbia highway road bond issue should leave no effort unfulfilled in the next six days to get the matter in its proper light before every voter in Wasco county.

In the west end of the county, through selfish motives, strong opposition has developed, and means are being adopted to combat it which may prove disastrous to the issue.

The road bond issue is a clear cut one. It is of utmost merit. There is nothing about it to be concealed.

At the fair grounds in Tygh Valley next Friday there will be a great gathering of residents of that section.

AN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIR

If it did nothing else, the great war left America with a host of friendship on the other side of the Atlantic which are far more worth while than that official good which exists with nations that merely swap ambassadors.

There is a more common bond of friendship between the Americans, French and English, than has ever been known before.

Far more is it a spontaneous, personal sort of that, made because large groups of the people of each of the three countries met, mingled, and came to know and understand each other.

Nothing more ably demonstrated the relations now existing than the spontaneity with which our two principal allies during the war joined in the American Memorial day services.

Before the war, probably not one Frenchman in 10,000, or an Englishman in the same proportion, knew the day on which the hero dead of America were remembered.

In a somewhat less degree, it can be imagined, the English participated with the Americans in Great Britain who observed Memorial Day.

At St. Paul's cathedral in London, the unveiling of a bust of George Washington probably was semi-official, and care was probably given by the British foreign office to see that the nation was adequately represented in order that no diplomatic insult might be construed.

But the government had nothing to do with the English men, women and children who went out in the graveyards which still hold American remains, the graveyards that are to be found from Inverness, in the extreme northern Scotland, to Southampton in the south.

THE FORUM

Maupin, May 27 Editor of The Chronicle—I want to inform you about the bond issue here at Maupin. Even the roba reast is covering the model you around us neck. You may think it is a joke but the bird has been seen by several people, a robin wearing one of the tags, "Vote Yes" around its neck. In fact I saw it myself. It had the string around its neck with the model "vote yes." How it got there I don't know, but it is an actual fact. Yours truly, ROBERT CARLAND

(From The Chronicle, May 31, 1892) Some one towed up a raft of timbers last night, but during the night it broke loose and drifted down the river again.

Mr. Ira Rowland, who lives near Mosier, had a narrow escape from drowning Saturday. A sudden shift of the wind blew the sail in such a manner that the rope, being tight, caused his boat to capsize and he was thrown into the water. He was a considerable distance from shore and he had to swim for it. The water was numbing and he was not an experienced swimmer, and he was about to sink, after a long struggle when his feet fortunately touched bottom. He waded out, almost exhausted, but thankful for his life. The boat floated down the river and was lost.
