Open Air Pavilion Planned—An open air dancing pavilion, containing in all 2,400 square feet of floor space, will be constructed a short distance west of the city by Ward Webber and Charles Beam. A petition for a dance hall license was granted this morning by the county court. The pavilion will be located in the heart of a shady grove, about half a mile from the end of the pavement on the Chenoweth road. In addition to the dancing space, Webber and Beam plan to place picnic tables at various points through the grove. Arrangements will also be made for serving ice cream and cold drinks upon the warm summer evenings. Construction will start at once.

Milk War On—Old III Cost of living was given another kick in the ribs yesterday when the Norman Cream company of this city announced a reduction in the price of milk to $2.50 per quart a month, delivered any place inside the city limits. In line with this reduction, the City Dairy today came forward with the announcement that milk delivered by that concern will cost only $3.50 per quart, in the future. The announcement by the Norman Cream company came as a surprise to other local dairymen, who claim that they cannot meet this quotation and make any profit. Until recently, local dairymen were delivering milk at $4.50 per quart.

Rousing Fourth Planned—Dufur is going to tear off the lid in a big Fourth of July celebration this year, according to F. B. Ingles, who is a business visitor in this city today. In fact, it will take at least two days to get all of the excess hilarity out of the systems of the Dufurites, and as a consequence July 3 and 4 have been officially set aside as days for celebration, Ingles declared. All of the details for the big time have not been worked out, as yet, but tentative plans call for horse races, ball games, athletic contests of all kinds and a general program of "stands." The trap teams of The Dalles and the Maupin rod and gun clubs, will be invited to participate in a series of shoots against each other and the Dufur trap team.

Two Boys Get Free Courses—Two Wasco county boys will soon leave for Corvallis, where they will attend a two-weeks' course in the O. A. C. summer school, free of charge. C. summer course as a guest of the Tum-A-Lum Lumber company, as a reward for growing the finest corn in Wasco county last year. His corn was awarded first place at the state fair, but owing to a misunderstanding about the keeping of a record of its growth, Roy was not allowed to claim the prize. The lumber company decided that the Wapinitia boy would not go unrewarded, however, and is sending him to the summer school with expenses paid, according to County Superintendent of Schools A. E. Gronewald. The two-weeks' course will be put on in the latter part of June.

blacks. The whites, hurried for adm-

The city was in darkness. Stores having firegrins in stock were smashed into. The blacks and the whites in groups began to parade the streets.

Two hours before midnight the battle began. When day dawned the state militia was in action. Machineguns rattled and the crack of the sharpshooters echoed across the valleys and the city's hill top to hill top. When the sun came over the eastern horizon it was hid from view by the great cone-shaped cloud of smoke that rose like an enshrouding of Vesuvius over that which yesterday was "bigger town" and which is today either red with flames or broken brick walls burned bare and shanties lying low in their black and white ashes.

Not were the flames confined to the black belt where the incendiary hands laid the torch "to smokes the demon out." The lapping flame does not recognize the color line. It does not discriminate between the white man's modern house and the poor black man's rude shack.

The fire department lent itself to keep the flames along the black border. They were not obedient flames and the white man in many instances has suffered along with the black man because some loose mouthed, shallow minded, blundering creature spread the lynch alarm and 12 base, brutal black men set out to show "em and if need be to shoot up the town.

Thousands upon thousands of innocent blacks today suffer the loss of all the little things that were theirs. They are camped on the hills about the city, in the great city convention hall and in the ballpark where the national game has been suspended that its high fence might be used as a corral around the negroes who are held in the guard.

The humane society is busy distributing food and water to those poor people. The number of dead and wounded is slowly climbing higher as the flames force out the facts. Every street intersection is policed by density traffic officers brought from behind the counters to clear the way for the ambulances and the apparatus that are constantly hurried from place to place.

The state militia has full authority. Squads of black prisoners are seen marching through the streets under soldier guard. Automobiles filled with colored people, literally pale with fear are being hurried here and there under guard.

The town is dazed. It all came so quickly that the south part of the city hardly yet realizes what happened in the center of town, and what the great crowd of blacks at the north end of the city represents.

But they will learn, as the world will learn, that vast cone-shaped cloud probably represents the worst race war conducted in the shortest span of time in the history of race wars in this land.

It has been a hideous thing. It is not Tulsa. It is not Tulsa's way. It is not only local but it is international, is the human way. It cannot be condoned and the splendid constructive spirit of Tulsa manifested itself as soon as the city beheld the awful scene by the light of day. Then, as rapidly as the lynch word had spread, the night before, the word was spread:

"Be men, Be white men, all white, white clear through. Keep a cool head. Be on the level. Mind your own business. Keep away from any mobs. Be part of no mob. Do not think mob, feel mob or act mob. Restore order."

The city that can, as Tulsa already has, meet this holocaust in that spirit, will rise a better city, more obedient in law. The lawless have already learned that that kind of performance in a rational, progressive and an unbuilding community does not get them anywhere.

It is the old story over again, ancient as time, race prejudice.

This is one more costly lesson to force the whole world to know that a crime is a crime by any race and it is as bad for one race to commit as another and a thousand crimes cannot condone the incendiary crime.

Lamb's work with the Slovaks consisted of welfare labors with the military and among the civilians. Much of the work was along athletic line, and Lamb trained and accompanied four of his proteges to Antwerp for the Olympian games. One member of the second was second in the half mile races.

He also worked in conjunction with the American Relief Administration (the Hoover work) at various times during his stay with the Czechs.
