A BOOMERANG

Are the voters of Mosier going to be hoodwinked by the "Citizens Welfare League of Wasco County" into doing a thing which they may regret for years? Do the Mosierites, all of them, think they can strong arm the county court into giving them market roads, by a threat to defeat the Dalles-California highway bond issue?

considered a sane exposition of the other side of the bond issue. Such a statement, as for instance, "would not this gigantic measure, most drastic in its scope, be a yoke of oppression, a burden more than you can bear, and a menace to the best interests of Wasco county?" cannot under any classification be a reasonable argument.

A Reply To The "Citizens Welfare League" Propaganda

MR. GITCHELL DENIES ANONYMOUS MISSIVE ATTACKING $800,000 ROAD BOND ISSUE; ORGANIZATION AFFRONT TO INTELLIGENCE OF COMMUNITY, HE INFERS.

Editor of The Chronicle: Yesterday I received in the mail a printed circular, one of many, I presume, which have been mailed to the voters of this county. This circular is addressed, "To the Taxpayer and Voter of Wasco county," and emanates from a mysterious agency which calls itself the "Citizens' Welfare League of Wasco county."

The mischievous tract is, as an example of palpable injustice, a gem of its kind, but as an authoritative, true and comprehensive treatment of the subject which it pretends to elucidate, it is a lamentable effort and an insult to the intelligence of every thinking and forward-looking voter of this county who receives it. The whole thing is simply an anonymous and insidious attack on the proposed $800,000 bond issue to provide for the construction of The Dalles-California highway through Wasco county, with its northern terminus at this city.

About Community Service

By Director H. W. Arbury.

A community worker told the writer the other day of his experience on the playground last summer in another state. It happened that the city where he was stationed, a community of some 35,000 people, had never had supervised playgrounds. Through the cooperation of the city commission permission was given to the Community Service worker to utilize the city hall square each evening of the week except Saturday and Sunday for conducting plays and games for the children.

but gradually individual preference was subordinated to team sense and a desire to win games. The mayor of this city became a frequent spectator at these games and more than once he expressed to me his wonder at the fine team work being developed in my young friends.

"We have over 1700 as many as play in this one game," said the leader. "I am going to choose first three girls of size fall to the other team, and second, those who play together best."

GRADATIONS OF CRIME

An interesting line of reasoning was adopted by Circuit Judge Fred W. Wilson yesterday when he sentenced three men to the penitentiary for moral offenses against young girls.

LOOKING BACKWARD

(From The Chronicle, June 2, 1931) Postmaster Crossen received a letter from the postmaster general this morning which must have given him intense satisfaction. It raises the office to a second class postoffice and means an increased emolument of $200 a year.

AT THE LIBRARY

Mr. Bok, author of "The Americanization of Edward Bok" spent some time with the Scribner company, and it fell to his lot to advise the public's interest in the books of the day.

MILK PRICES

There's one kind of a war that Mr. Estimate Consumer likes to read about. When competition begins to cut and offering inducements to the trade, then and there a "war" is on, and it is a conflict in which the consumer always wins.
