

LORD BYNG NAMED CANADIAN GOVERNOR

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR GENERAL ACCEPTS NORTH AMERICAN APPOINTMENT.

LONDON, June 4—Lord Byng, one of the most famous generals during the world war, has accepted the appointment of governor-general of Canada. It was announced here today.

Byng, who is 58 years old, was made a baron in 1919 in recognition of his war service. He had been in the British army since 1882.

In 1879 the family settled on a home stead in the Wrentham district.

She attended school at St. Mary's academy in the '80s, but was not a graduate of that institution.

In 1891 she was married to George Brown. No children were born to the union. In addition to Mr. Brown, she is survived by three brothers, James L. Kelly, Vincent Kelly and Joseph D. Kelly. A sister, Mrs. Katie Curran, resides in Portland.

The funeral will be held Monday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Peter's Catholic church. Requiem mass will be celebrated by Father P. J. O'Rourke, and interment will be in the Catholic cemetery.

Mrs. Brown was long active in the work of the Catholic church. She was prominently identified with the Catholic Ladies' Social circle.

The body is now at Crandall's Undertaking company. This afternoon it will be removed to the residence of James L. Kelly, 312 Benton street, and will lie in state there all day Sunday.

Wilson J. Manchester's death was due to dilation of the heart, caused it is supposed, from heavy lifting in connection with his work in handling freight on the truck line.

He was taken ill Thursday, and last night, after great suffering, became unconscious. Death came about 9 o'clock this morning in the family home at 102 West Tenth street.

Mr. Manchester was a member of the firm of M. U. Ross and company in addition to maintaining The Dalles-Dufur truck company.

His widow and a son, George Ernest Manchester, survive. A brother, C. M. Manchester, and a sister, Mrs. Martha Voorhies, of Modesto, Cal., also survive. Two sons died in infancy.

Practically all of his life, Mr. Manchester was a lumberman. He was born in St. Lawrence county, New York, but early in life went to Houghton county, Mich., where he worked the lumber industry.

He was married in Michigan, and the family came to Oregon 14 years ago. Mr. Manchester built the mill on upper Five Mile, and maintained it until 1917, when he moved to The Dalles.

Just prior to residence in Wasco county, the Manchesters lived on the Washington side, near Columbia (now Maryhill), and Mr. Manchester was a member of the First Adventist church located there.

The body is now with the Crandall Undertaking company. The funeral will be held at 9:30 Monday evening from the Crandall chapel. Burial will be in Odd Fellows' cemetery.

U. S. MAY PAY ALL PENSIONS MONTHLY

(Chronicle's Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, June 4.—All persons drawing pensions from the United States, based on military or naval service, will receive their pensions monthly instead of quarterly, if the bill reported to the house favorably by the committee on pensions becomes a law.

This bill provides that, beginning September, 1921, all pensioning shall be paid monthly on the fourth day of each month. Should this bill become a law—and there is good prospect for its passage in both houses—more than half a million residents of the United States will be greatly benefited, and the hardship of waiting ninety days for the arrival of the pension will be at an end.

Will Affect All

This affects all those drawing pensions on military and naval service of the war of 1812, war with Mexico, the Civil war, the war with Spain, the various Indian wars up to 1891 and all those granted up to the time of the world war. Congress in providing for the compensation of soldiers and sailors of the world war provided that all compensation should be made on a monthly basis. This new bill is to place the other pensioners of the government on the same basis as veterans of the world war.

There are two hundred and twenty-five thousand soldiers who entered service in the Civil war now on the pension roll and there are more than 280,000 widows drawing pensions because their husbands were soldiers in the conflict of the states. All told, exclusive of the veterans of the world war, there are now approximately 571,000 persons on the pension roll of the United States.

Fall Favors Bill

In commenting on this bill Secretary of the Interior Fall, who favors the legislation, has this to say concerning the proposed change:

"Salaries and wages are universally paid weekly, bimonthly or monthly, and retail business generally is conducted on a cash basis or on short term credit, 30 days at the longest.

"The men and boys who entered the army or navy in defense of the government in the world war were mostly persons who earned their livelihood with their hands or brains and who had up to the beginning of their service received their wages weekly, bimonthly or monthly. In considering these facts the congress doubtless reasoned that if it was considered good policy to pay salaries and wages at short intervals to people in good health to enable them to use their income to the best advantage, it would be equally as good policy and more necessary to pay the compensation to disabled men, widowed women and minor orphaned children at the very shortest practicable intervals, and fixed upon the monthly payment as the proper period.

For Monthly Payment

"Now, if upon full consideration of the facts and conditions the congress decided that the compensation to be paid by the bureau of war risk insurance to soldiers and sailors of the world war and their dependents should be paid monthly, I think it is fair to assume that taking into consideration the necessarily advanced ages of the pensioners of the war of 1812, the Mexican war, the Civil war, the war with Spain, and the Indian wars, all pensions paid by the bureau of pensions should be paid monthly.

BUDGET BOARD IS GETTING WORK READY

(Chronicle's Salem Bureau)

SALEM, Ore., June 4.—The machinery under which the new state budget law will be operative is being assembled and oiled up by Secretary of State Sam A. Kozer. The law became effective May 25.

Frank Meredith, of Salem, has been employed to put the act into operation. He has compiled a list of classifications which will appear on blanks to be furnished the heads of all state institutions and departments for monthly reports to the secretary of state, and through him made available to the budget commission. The personnel of the state board of control, which is the governor, the secretary of state and the state treasurer, comprises the commission.

The list of classifications has the approval of Secretary of State Kozer, but the general plan of operation is yet in tentative state and yet to be approved. Mr. Kozer is now in the East.

In brief the budget commission act is designed to save the time of the legislative session, particularly the ways and means committee. All items of all departments going into the budget as presented to the legislature will have had the approval of the budget commission and its recommendation after having been adjusted to the general financial status of the state. While all estimated requirements of the state departments and institutions will have been threshed out by the budget commission prior to the meeting of the legislature, the commission's action will not be final.

The ways and means committee will still have power to cut down or add to and any department head not satisfied with the findings of the commission may carry his appeal to the ways and means committee. However, the long drawn out sessions that have characterized the meetings of the ways and means committees in past legislative sessions are certain to be eliminated to a great degree.

Heretofore the state board of control has been confined legally to passing on only the budget estimates of the 10 state institutions under its jurisdiction. The budget commission's jurisdiction will extend to every activity, "public or private," to quote the law "supported or aided in whole or in part from money disbursed through the state treasury."

Whatever rules are necessary to carry out the act the commission has power to prescribe. In revising, increasing or diminishing budget estimates, the majority vote of the commission shall rule. It has power to call into conference any officials necessary, and may employ an executive officer or statistician and such other clerical assistance as is necessary to carry out the provisions of the act, and may fix their compensation. For the present biennium its expenditures is limited to $6000.

num its expenditures is limited to $6000.

Budget estimates as prepared by department or institution heads are required to be submitted to the commission on or before October 1, of each even-numbered year.

Time For Pleas

This also applies to persons having claims against the state. Also the commission shall receive on or before October 1 statements of any desired appropriations presented by individuals, corporations or associations, including municipal corporations, intended for legislative consideration. This class of statements shall be filed by the commission and turned over to the secretary of state without recommendation, and shall be compiled and printed by the secretary of state with all other data from the commission.

After determining the amount of the estimates of state activities, and not later than November 15, or such even-numbered year, the commission shall file the matter with the secretary of state together with recommendations. This the secretary of state shall have printed with comparative data.

Not later than December 26 the secretary of state is required to submit the printed budget to the governor and to the members of the legislature.

TIGER NOT WORRIED BY FRANCE'S WOES

By Hudson Hawley

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, June 4.—The Tiger is making believe that his teeth have been pulled and is having the time of his life playing around his library letting "deceitful old men like Tarde" do the dirty political work.

Georges Clemenceau, octogenarian kid, doesn't give a hoot whether school keeps or not. The rise or fall of new governments and new premiers affects him not at all. In general, he is living up to the French national motto: "Je m'en fiche," which, freely translated, means "I should give a damn."

I went down to eight Rue Franklin, where the Tiger has had his hair for years, to see "old father Victory." I was admitted without ceremony and bowed to the wait in the polite French fashion.

"Mes hommages, M. le president," I said.

But the Tiger retorted in the most fluent English—"I'm doing nothing. I'm not being interviewed, I'm not answering any questions."

"But your trans-Atlantic friends," I said, "are asking after your health. They want to know what your plans and prospects are. They think a good deal of you, you know, and they want to know how you find things."

Clemenceau grinned, "Thank them very much for me," he said. "They are kind to remember me."

I asked him if he were going to Vichy this summer, as usual.

"Yes," he said. "There's nothing so very wonderful about that, is there? Just at present I'm hunting around this library of mine for a particular book. I can't find it. All the books here are very dusty. I dare say the same thing has happened to you, hasn't it?"

"How about writing that you are a regular attendant at the Folies Bergeres," I asked him. He laughed and retorted, "I haven't been there in years. Nor to the Comedie Francaise, either. I go just once in a while to hear the music somewhere."

But politics, Gog would never think Clemenceau knew the meaning of the word. Mention of it is tabooed.

The Tiger's color is splendid and his eyes still have their irrepressible twinkle. He wears his celebrated skull cap which resembles a priest's biretta—somewhat of an incongruity at a rickish angle, and a little low tie that always seems on the point of riding up under his ear. His step is firm and his hand-clasp is warm. Clemenceau's French accent is so unusual that it seemed as if I were listening to some retired Irish politician.

"The tiger hasn't the slightest ambition for any job from premier to gendarmes," his friends declare.

CLOUDBURST IN

to $2,000,000 it was estimated.

Near Loveland the dam holding back Lake Loveland threatened early today to go out. Thousands of acres of rich farming land would be inundated.

Virtually every citizen of Loveland today was working frantically to stop the numerous leaks in the dike. The Colorado and Southern railway bridge over the Big Thompson river there was swept away. Hundreds of feet of track were washed out. Rail service is completely demoralized.

Near Sterling, Mrs. Carl Davis and her baby were drowned when their home was swept away by a wall of water that rushed down the creek following a cloudburst. Two other children are missing.

A recent party which left Brookfield late last night to search for a group of seven motorists, believed to have perished when a bridge over a small creek went out, today reported no trace of the motorists has been found.

Two children of William Grey were drowned while the father was carrying them from their home in Pueblo, which was demolished by a sudden flood of water from Dry creek, near Grey's home. The children were swept

Real Estate News

Not a single real estate transaction of any importance was recorded in The Dalles during the last week, according to the reports of real estate dealers.

A number of deeds were recorded at the court house, however, which shows that some county property, at least, has been moving. The great majority of these sales were consummated without the assistance of real estate dealers.

Regardless of the generally reported stagnant condition of the local real estate market, there continues in evidence a shortage of houses, with eight or ten applicants for every vacant dwelling, dealers report.

from Grey's arms. Both he and his wife escaped.

Grave fears were felt today for residents of Marshall, a mining town 23 miles north of Denver. The big dam, holding back an 800-acre lake, was in imminent danger of going out. A break in the dam would mean the destruction of the little town and the flooding of scores of mines. Efforts of workers to stop leaks in the dam have proved futile. Watchers with dynamite bombs to warn citizens if the dam broke kept an all-night vigil. Practically all of the townspeople have fled from their homes.

At Louisville, another mining camp a store building collapsed. Ten persons in the building escaped injury. The streets were running with water.

Houses were swept away by overflow torrents from Coal creek.

Large sections of tracks on frillways in the flooded areas have been swept away, 15 miles of the Lincoln highway, transcontinental automobile route, being under water.

Concern was felt today for the safety of tourists who have been marooned in the mountains.

Hundreds of acres of crops are under water, large numbers of livestock have perished, and the loss to farmers and to the railways will run into the hundreds of thousands, it was estimated.

The present flood is the most destructive one in Colorado in twenty years, according to authorities.

In addressing the District Representatives in convention in Detroit last week Mr. F. J. Haynes, president and general manager of Dodge Brothers, said in part:

"I can think of nothing more pathetic than for a manufacturer to have to sell a product with nothing to commend it but a price."

From the beginning Dodge Brothers never have solicited the patronage of the American people on a basis of price, but have chosen rather to build their car so well as to make the purchase price as nearly as possible the last expenditure.
