

UNION LEADERS HURT AT RAIL STRIKE

By Alexander F. Jones
(United News Staff Correspondent)
CHICAGO, June 9.—Railroad employees may accept the $100,000,000 wage cut ordered by the federal labor board to take effect July 1 and they may not.

This latest possibility was injected into the hearings by the board of applications for wage cuts by railroads not included in the June 1 decision. Wednesday by L. E. Sheppard, general president of the Order of Railway Conductors, and by W. G. Lee, president of the Order of Railway Trainmen.

This is the first time in all the negotiations over the proposed wage reductions for 2,000,000 railroad employees that strike talk has been so much as remotely suggested by responsible rail union leaders.

Both of the leaders solemnly warned the board that they "wouldn't be responsible" for the decision of the men if unsatisfactory wage cuts are announced in July.

B. M. Jewell, president of the American Federation of Labor railway department, told the board that acceptance or rejection votes on the proposed cuts were put in the mails Wednesday for the union membership.

"The vote will be completed June 25," he said. "We will know where we stand when the board makes its final decision in July."

It is said that the announced 12 per cent cut will not be rejected by the men, but that if the rail board yield, to please the carriers to increase the reduction to wipe out the entire $600,000,000 increase of last July, that direct action is a distinct possibility.

The five big brotherhoods will call in every divisional chairman in the country on July 1 to pass on acceptance or rejection of the reductions. If they reject the board's decision, the question will be put up to the men direct for strike votes.

"When our men meet here in July it will be with a feeling that they have been unjustly dealt with," said L. E. Sheppard. "If traffic is interrupted the responsibility will first be applicable to the railroads due to the fact that the railroads rushed to the United States railroad board instead of meeting the organizations in a central conference as heretofore. Secondly, the responsibility for a conflict should one take place, will rest on the labor board for the reduction order."

This statement caused considerable excitement and it was immediately backed up by W. G. Lee, of the train men.

Sheppard later told the United News that he could make no predictions whatever on the strike possibility.

"The men must accept or refuse," he said. "They have no means of modifying or changing it. No one can correctly predict what the men will do. A strike vote has frequently been delivered, but in several cases even after such a vote, strikes have been avoided."

Admiral Sims Faces Reprimand For Anti-Irish Speech In London

NAVAL INSURGENT, ON CARPET FOR INSURGENT UTTERANCES BEFORE OFFICIALS OF PREVIOUS THREE ADMINISTRATIONS, CRITICISES IRISH-AMERICANS.

By Ralph H. Turner
(United News Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, June 9.—Rear Admiral William S. Sims, commander of the American naval forces overseas during the war, has created a situation of "greatest delicacy," in the opinion of Secretary of the Navy Denby.

This was part of Denby's comment on the admiral's speech before the English Speaking Union in London, after Denby had rebuked Sims ordering him to inform the navy department immediately whether he was corrected in press dispatches. Denby declared, in his cable, that he had read "with amazement" certain extracts from Sims' speech.

The remarks of the American admiral, in which he attacked the Sinn Fein movement and referred with bitterness to certain types of Americans, attracted wide comment in Washington, both in naval circles and in congress.

Senator Merrill McCormick, of Illinois, branding the Sims' speech as "disgusting," led the criticism and complained formally both to President Harding and Secretary Denby against the utterances. Denby's cable to Sims followed the visit of McCormick.

Denby stated, however, that he had not conferred with the president on the subject and that he assumed full responsibility for the inquiry to Sims. Denby added that he had "decided views" on the situation created by Sims, but that he would not indicate what action would be taken against the admiral, in the event the latter confirmed the dispatches quoting his address.

An order is being framed in the navy now, Denby said, which aims to remove any suggestion of censorship from the writings or oral utterances of officers, but this made it all the more important, he added, that officers exercise special care in their remarks.

"It is grossly improper," Senator McCormick said, "for a naval officer abroad to asperse the loyalty of a great number of his fellow citizens. Admiral Sims, not by implication, but by his own direct statements, charged that not a handful, but multitudes of his fellow citizens are actuated first, not by devotion to America, but to the cause of some other people. Thank God, we know that is not true. We know that Americans, of whatever blood, above all are Americans, though they cherish sentiments for the land of their origin—England in the case of some, like Admiral Sims, Ireland or some other land in the case of others."

"It does not become any American to go abroad to pass public strictures upon his fellow citizens."

Senator LaFollette, of Wisconsin, author of the resolution for recognition of the Irish republic, referred to Sims' speech as "unfortunate" but refused to comment further. He declared, however, that he would comment upon it when he calls his measure in a few days. LaFollette's resolution is of the character which Sims advised the British to ignore as being "forced by Jackson" votes.

Senator Reed, of Missouri, declared that if Sims was correctly quoted his speech was "simply name-casting."

Sims, who is president of the Naval War college at Newport, R. I., went to England on a vacation and to receive a degree from a British university.

The situation created by his speech aroused unusual interest because of his excellent naval record, which invariably has been coupled with a tendency towards insubordination.

Naval officers recalled that in 1898, when Americans were jubilant over their Spanish victory, Sims reported from an European capital that in a battle with a first class naval power the United States "would not even achieve a respectable defeat." Sims.
