Goes to New Position—A. K. Chase, former agricultural agent of Wasco county, left Tuesday evening for Laramie, Wyo., to assume his new duties as state club leader under the extension work of the Wyoming agricultural college. Chase had considerable experience in state club work among boys and girls in Oregon, and is resuming a line of endeavor in which he has been very successful. Chase was agricultural agent in Wasco county for three years, resigning to take up wheat farming, leasing the Herbert Eckert ranch. He decided to quit farming and return to the state work this spring.

Watching for Murderers—Chief of Police Frank Heater is today searching all trails for some trace of two armed hoboes who last night shot and killed Railroad Detective Phillips in Portland. Heater received word of the killing this morning from the Portland police. Detective Phillips is said to have come upon the two tramps as they were in the act of breaking into a freight car standing in the Albina yard. According to the report received from Portland, the detective then attempted to arrest the two men, who shot and fatally injured the special officer in the scuffle that followed. The murderers are thought to have made their escape on an outgoing freight train.

Latest in Auto Beds—The latest in automobile traveling equipment, invented by Vernon J. Brown, a Portland doctor, passed through The Dalles this morning enroute to Yellowstone National park, where Mr. and Mrs. Brown and a friend, Mrs. Jay Knapp, expect to spend several weeks. The new invention is nothing more than an automobile top with two upper berths built into it. It takes the place of the regular top and is high enough to clear the heads of the passengers in the car with ease. The entire arrangement is fastened to projecting rods running underneath the automobile, to the top of the windshield posts and to the top of the rear seat of the car. When the automobile is stopped, brace rods are let down to the ground supporting the top and two beds while canvas wings, kept rolled up during driving, are let down to give privacy. The new auto camp bed is not on the market, as yet, but will probably sell for about $200, the inventor believes.

Toy Airplane Patent—A patent has been granted to Robert L. Parrish of this city for a new toy airplane, invented by him. The airplane, which is constructed in the form of a glider, is launched by means of a spring gun, which sends the miniature airplane through the air with considerable force. Parrish is undecided whether to undertake the manufacture of the airplane himself or accept an offer which he has received from an eastern toy manufacturer, who would undertake the manufacture of the new toy upon a royalty basis.

Kent Elevator Bankrupt—The Oregon Journal (Portland) carried the following news item Tuesday: "The Kent Elevator company of Kent, Sherman county, was adjudged a bankrupt Monday in the federal court and the case turned over to Referee A. M. Cannon for disposition. In the voluntary petition which was filed by J. M. Wilson following a meeting of the company officers on June 3, the liabilities are given as $51,265.11 and the assets as $70,376.76. The liabilities consist mainly of taxes, wages, rent and notes due to banks, farm machine companies and farm supply houses. Assets include grain, machinery, office furniture and a few notes. Wilson attached a note to the petition after he had them filled out in which he states a considerable shortage in the wheat in the elevator bins appeared since he prepared his schedules. He said he was unable to inform the court as to the exact shortage."

Columbia Continues Drop—The Columbia river today continued its steady decline, this morning's government reading showing the water at 49.8 feet, a drop of 4 of a foot during the last 24 hours. Business houses along Second street are still unable to make use of their basements, however. The water will have to get below the 49 foot mark before the majority of basements are dry again, merchants report. H. R. Fancher has a pump going at The Dalles garage, keeping the water level down as far as possible in order to save valuable machinery, too heavy to move, from being damaged by rust. One strange thing about the flood is the manner in which the seepage water, that which is flooding the basements, is acting. Last night, the basement of the Parlor grocery was almost completely dry. This morning, with the river still going down, the basement has more water in it than ever. Water in the numerous pools in low points near the tracks, is also still coming up, despite the fact that its source, the Columbia, is rapidly going down.

"BIG TIM" MURPHY

do you think I am—a cockroach? He freely admitted that he had sent the trunk containing the $112,900 to his father-in-law's home, but he would not acknowledge that he actually executed the holdup. He said a "big mistake had been made," and that everything would be explained at the proper time.

"I'm holding the sack for someone else," he said. "I can explain all this. I'll explain it all. It's—why, it's nothing at all. If there's anything wrong about it, why, you know, I'll take all the blame myself."

Positive proof that Murphy not only engineered the Dearborn street station theft, but also the $100,000 Pullman station robbery of last August, is in the government's hands, according to federal authorities.

One question remains, they say, to complete the solution of the Dearborn station robbery. Someone with an intimate knowledge of the federal reserve bank, from which most of the $350,000 in currency and bonds was being shipped, "tipped off" the Murphy gang that the consignment was being sent out. Who was he? Federal officials have long suspected that an "inside man" has been giving tips to the perpetrators of a long series of middle west mail robberies.

In his confession, "Big Tim's" chauffeur named, besides Murphy, Peter and himself, Vincenzo Cosmano, "Big Tim's" right hand man, George M. Hecker, alias Bradford, one time rail way postoffice clerk, an escaped prisoner from the United States disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Sam Simon, a peddler, Peter Guesenberg, a city employe, and three other men.

The robbery, he said, was planned in Murphy's office in the headquarters of the gas workers' union.

"Big Tim" federal officials say, has one chance in a million of escaping a long term in prison.

"Big Tim" seems to realize it. It's Uncle Sam, now—see?
