ACTION OF

Representative Julius Kahn of California, brought smiles to the faces of the peripatetic legislators when he said that many who voted in favor of prohibiting beer would enjoy a glass of it with their dinners.

"There are many men in this congress who vote for prohibition and drink more in a day than I do in a year, although I vote against it," said Kahn.

Interested gallery spectators were Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel for the Anti-Saloon league, and E. C. Dinwiddie, formerly a member of the league who is now associated with other reform organizations. Wheeler and Dinwiddie had disputed about the manner in which the bill should be drawn. They were not together.

Representative Gallivan of Massachusetts, made the principal speech of the day, in which he compared Representative Volstead, prohibition leader, with Ramesses I of Egypt. "Egypt died because of too much regulation by law," declared Gallivan. He suggested that the bill be christened "the Volstead act, Jr."

"We fooled the country with the Volstead law a year ago, and now we are going to fool it with the Volstead law, Jr.," he said, "that it may not have to bear the sins of the parent, nor be hampered in its own course as it goes out before the country some more."

The bill's committee is again bowing to the minority. This is in keeping with the whole agitation and legislation concerning prohibition.

has been legislation for the minority. The bill, in addition to knocking out the beer ruling, has raised the question of how many whiskey prescriptions doctors may write. The prohibition commissioner arbitrarily has set the number at 100 every 90 days.

GOVERNMENT WILL FARM OUT ITS WAR LEASES

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The war department is soon going into the real estate market seeking tenants for surplus space in some of the arsenals and other government buildings expanded under war pressure.

Secretary of War Weeks has announced that some of the department buildings throughout the country which would be good for manufacturing purposes and others have vast storage space which could be utilized by private business concerns such facilities. He is going to advertise for bids for tenancy of both.

The plan is part of Weeks' general program of economy. He announced the department has effected savings in rentals at the rate of nearly $369,000 a year out of annual rentals totalling $1,500,000, a year, when he took office. This was accomplished by consolidating and adjusting various work created during the war.

In addition, on July 1, the government gives up its lease on the 10,000 acre chemical warfare experimental grounds at Lakehurst, N. J., but the saving on this has not been determined because no rate of rental was ever fixed on this ground, Weeks says.

WOOL MARKETING PLANS DISCUSSED

regional and local county wool pools, were discussed at a conference recently held in Washington. The farm bureau federation favors the plan of regional pools at points of large concentration, and is not convinced, it is said, of the practical value of the tentative wool grades. The conference resulted in a better understanding of the views of the farm bureau federation and of the bureau of markets regarding the points under discussion.

The meeting adjourned with the understanding that the bureau of markets would arrange for a later conference between representative wool growers, buyers, mills, and organizations of farmers at a convenient date in order to promote a better understanding of the work of the bureau with respect to pooling, grading, and marketing wool.
