MR. NOBODY.

By Mr. Nobody.

I know a funny little man, As quiet as a mouse, Who does the mischief that is done In everybody's house. There's no one ever sees his face, And yet we all agree, That every plate we break was cracked

Tis he who always tears our books-Who leaves the door ajar : He pulls the buttons from our shirts, And scatters pins afar. That squeaking door will always squeal For, prithee don't you see, We leave the oiling to be done By Mr. Nobody?

He puts damp wood upon the fire. That kettles cannot boil: His are the feet that bring in mud, And all the carpets soil. The papers always are mislaid ; Who had them last, but he? There's no one tosses them about But Mr. Nobody.

The finger marks upon the doors By none of us are made : We never leave the blinds unclosed, To let the curtains fade. The ink we never spill; the boots That lying round you see, Are not our boots! They all belong To Mr. Nobody!

It has quite unnerved me. If people are going to fire bombshells into your house, they ought, at least, to give fair warning, so as not to upset one's self-posses sion entirely. I've not been fit for anything this afternoon. Prepare yourself for a great surprise, Fogy, for if you were to guess all night you'd never think what it is.

The object of this association is to promote agreeable and useful relations between women of literary and artistic tastes. It is entirely independent of sectionalism or partizanship. It recognizes women of thought, taste, intelligence, cul ture, and humanity, everywhere, particularly where these qualities have found expression in outward life and work.

It aims to establish a sort of Free Masonry among women of similar pursuits, to render them helpful to each other, and bridge over, in some degree, the barrier which custom and social etiquette place; in the way of friendly intercourse. It affords an opportunity for the discussion, among women, of the new facts and principles which are constantly being evolved the results of which promise to exert a most important influence on the future of woman and the welfare of society.

We shall reach this city by and by, but for the present we will think of the Yang-te-ze and its connections. There are no obstacles on the north bank, no need of locks, and so the grand, artificial water way-the noble monument of Eve to give him the apple-core, he's the ancient civilization-continues on to find out what she's about. You'd Whang-ho, or Yellow River, and look well trying to manage a train, then on to Pekin. I have said that and have everybody else on it. But it goes to the Yellow River, a state-I wouldn't care so much for the ruin ment which needs a little elaboration. of my dress as I would for the ruin The map which lies before me gives of my reputation, if you should try to the the Yellow river as emptying into the Yellow Sea, and I suppose believe in women speaking in public; that all of the school atlases give to grind up the odds and ends of all but I should hate to employ you to that as the outlet; but I am informed take my place. You'd go to flatter- that the larger volume of the water ing up every pretty member of that of that river empties into the Gulf of

We might step on board one of these queer river craft, spread the latten sails, turn up the grand canal at the northern bend of the Yang-tethe main channel of the Yellow river; work our way one thousand miles due three or four hundred miles in that country and re-enter China and traverse the northwest provinces of the It's no use reasoning with you, Empire.

As yet nothing is known as to the practicability of navigating these northern streams by steam, but here Pekin. During the war between the Allies and China the city of Ching Kinng was taken by the naval forces, the blow at once, for it stopped all trade between the north and south.

But turning once more to the Yang te-ze we see it running through the heart of the Empire. We may steam from the city of Ching Kiang with a southwest general course almost to the boundary of Burman. It has been explored by Capt. Blaik-Thibet, perhaps to Turkestan. The

We meet great fafts of bamboo and timber with houses upon them which have floated down from the western provinces of the Empire. The raftsmen, till reaching Hankow: never saw a steamboat, and they can

I never painted. I'm low's heart with a two dollar muslin important part in the progress of civilization. In this respect the enough and to spare. Because you the hearts of the other girls in her Yang-te-ze will surpass all other found a pink saucer which I used for set with anything less than a two fivers upon the globe. The tides of painting roses, you must twit me of hundred dollar satin! And that's the civilization-of trade and commerce but the Yan-te-ze is the great artery take foreigners into its customs serpointing Mr. Burlingame as Envoy to Western nations. We are going towards the heart of the empire to-day, in a steamer built on the Hudson, propelled by an engine from the hands of New York mechanics, our captain a clear-headed Yankee from Cape Ann, and we are brought face to face with questions to play on this continent? San Francisco and the valley of the Columbis-which is to be the New England of the Pacific coast-are twentyfive days distant. Next year New York will be one month from Shanghai. What is to be the measure of influence of American ideas-politupon America? Sixty to eighty thousand Chinamen already in California and Oregon, one thousand passengers. Four hundred sailed America has 35,000,000 inhabitants China 400,000,000. In China ever inch of land is occupied : here, millions of acres are waiting for the coming of the cultivator.

We call Astor, Vanderbilt and Belmont money kings, but there are merchants in China rich enough to buy up a half dozen of the wealthiest men of the United States, whose money bags are heavier than those of the Rothschilds! As vet the West is tributary to the East. China compels us to bring our silver to her coffers. She is powerful enough to keep the balance of trade against us.

Is there power and vitality enough in the United States to affect this inert mass? Is there not reason to fear that the emigration of Chinamen to America will serve as a drag upon our own progress? Is there power enough in the great democratic mill lands-to reduce Ireland, Germany, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Eng. land, Scotland, Italy, Africa, Mexico and China to common pulp? Shall
