STOMACH BITTERS

F ET IT BE DISTINCTLY BORNE IN I mind that HOSTETTER'S BITTERS is a MEDICINAL PREPARATION, not a beverage, and that it is entirely free from the attributes which create and foster a passion for stimulants, and which belong to all the distilled and fomented liquors of commerce. Its alcoholic element is derived from sound rye, a grain which, according to the testimony of the most distinguished analyti; cal chemists, yields a more wholesome spirit than any other known substance. But the QUINTESSENCE OF RYE employed in the manufacture of the Bitters, must not be confounded with the rye spirit sold in the market as Bourbon and Monongahela Whisky The very best brands of those liquors procured for hospital use, and preferred by the I olical Staffs of the Army and Navy to any other liquor, are not to be compared in excellence with the article used in the concoction of the GREAT STOMACHIC. It is subjected, in the first instance, to a process which deprives it of the bungent and acrid elements proved by chemical test to exist in even what are deemed the finest imported and domestic spirits, and after being thus purified, is kept on hand long enough to give it mellowness before being medicated. The chief virtue of the preparations is not, however, in its spirituous basis, but in the juices of the tonic, aperient, corrective and intermixed with it. Perhaps, it may be arged, that if they impart to the alcoholic fluid its preventive and remedial qualities, water impregnated with the same ingredients would answer the purpose as well. Nothing but profound ignorance of the laws of physiology and pathelogy can excuse such an error. Only by a diffusible stimulant can the medicinal constituents, that are to fortify the system against disease, or counteract diseased acion, be conveyed directly to their destination. The stimulant rapidly pervades the animal structure, carrying with it to the points where it is needed, the required antidote. Water will not do this. It has, comparatively speaking, no propelling or diffuave power. Nor is this all. Nothing but alcohol will preserve the medicing! property of vegetable extracts in a fluid state. Mix them with water and the compound will antibilious vegetable products so largely

It is claimed that HOSTETTER'S BIT, TERS commend themselves to the special layor of the Temperance Physician, as the only diffusive stimulant which he can prescribe without danger of unduly exciting the brain of his patient, and of creating that morbid thurst for alcohol which doses of inmedicated spirits are so apt to engender. To argue with the dogmatists who assert that stimulants are always unnecessary and pernicious, would be a waste of time. The most eminent lights of Medical Science have settled that question, and it is not worth while to have a controversy with the rushlight. The leading champions of temperance in the United States, Horace Greeley, among the number, have announced that they are not in favor of prohibiting the employment of spirituous liquors as mediferment, turn sour and become worse than

So much for the moral claims of the article under the temperance code. The ground being thus cleared, and it is hoped, to the satisfaction of every rational champion of sobriety, the specific application of the Bitters to the prevention and cure of the "ills that flesh is heir to," comes next in order. Peasons whose lives are peculiarly sensitive are said to be of a "bilious habit." The morbid influences which affect others, in a general way, seem in their cases to operate directly and mainly upon the biliary organ. Many who are thus predisposed to an overflow of bile are subject to periodical attacks of biliousness, accompanied by pain in the right side, languor, pain between the should ers, gloomy feelings, and that peculiar tingo of the complexion which indicates that a off through the boweis, has been misairected to the venous system, and is present in the superficial bloodvessels. To aver! these symptoms, and the general disorder of the internal organs, which they involve, it is adisable for individuals of a bilious habit to take at least two doses of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS daily at such times as they have reason to apprehend an attack. Indeed, all who have a constitutional and temperamental tendency to liver complaints would do well to take a dose of this admirable ANTI-BILIOUS STOMACHIC every day, When the great secretive gland is seriously disordered, the medicine usually resorted to is mercury, which, unless administered with very great caption, is infinitely more dangerous than the disease it is intended to subdue. In a large majority of the cases treated with calomel, or blue pill, the antibilious and alterative properties of the Bitters would produce the desired effect. And et it be borne in mind that, whereas mercury in every shape is an insidious poison, the medicinal ingredients of this preparation consist exclusively of wholesome vegetable
