A tiny blossom, pale and sweet-I'd nursed e'en since its birth, When last I sought 'twas all in vain, For oh! the bitter winds and rain Had crushed it to the earth.

A bud of richest promise grew Within my garden wall. I gazed upon it, soft and fair, And hoped 'twould yield a flower rare Ere autumn leaves might fail.

A beauteous form of infant grace, I thought to call my own;
One tender breath upon my cheek,
One sigh of parting love to speak—
My heavenly gift had flown.

Then, as I faint and pow'rless grew To quaff Life's bitter cup, An angel form, just overhead, And bending down in pity said, "Look up from earth-look up

MOTHER IS CHILDISH,

"She is childish!" How thoughtless, how disrespectful, how ignorant and sinful an expression! What! that mother whose form is bowed, whose hair is silvered, whose eyes are dimmed in watching over you, whose interest in you has never abated, though another calls you his! Her judgment, believe me, young friend, is deeper, more matured than yours; but because you differ, how easy it is to say, "Mother is childish!" Shame on you! I know it is believed by the giddy young that old folks get childish. The author who said, "Young folks think old folks are fools; but old folks know what young folks are," spoke truth undying. Says one, "At forty man suspects himself a fool-knows it at fifty." I know that there are many young who are talented; but they do not get wiser in age?
