The election of Mr. Garfield as delegate under all the circumstances, is a signal illustration of what may be accomplished by earnest, determined work, and we confess that we are agreeably disappointed at the result. We were inclined to the opinion that the Republican party had a majority of the legal voters of that territory ; but the opposition which confronted Mr. Garfield at the onset of the campaign was enough to appal any but the o potent heart.

Besides the Democratic party, properly speaking, there appeared to be a wide spread disaffection among Republicans, ndications were that it would be and the impossible to unite the party in support of the nominee. Eut as the canvass progressed it became evident that the disafo fection in the party was mostly on the surface, and extended but little beyond the "official clique," many of whom had been raised from the obscurity to which they belong, and to which they will soon return-by the man whom they treacher-such care as to avoid those terrible acci-purchasing, to assist them in building upon • ously conspired to defeat.
