NEVER AGAIN.

BY SILVIE A. SPERRY. Summer will come, and flowers will bloom.

Bud and blossom, and bloom o'er his grave; I shall inhale their fragrant perfume; I shall see the willow tree's long leaves wave, And hear birds carol above his grave. No thought, no message to ease my pain;

No balm for a heart that's aching sore; The song of birds will never again Waken the dreams and fancies of yore, Or heal the heart that is sick and sore,

My darling! my darling! Damp and cold Is the bed they made him under the snow; Would that my loving arms might enfold! Would I were sleeping, never to know A pain or sorrow under the snow!

The snow will melt in the Summer sun; The grass and flowers will come again; I shall live to see Summers, one by one, Shower their treasures where he is lain; Live, but never be happy again!

Over the grave in the church-yard now; Perhaps, when the Summer breezes blow, The clols will cover this aching brow; Would the Summer were here even now!

My own, my darling! cold is the snow woman a man always loves, and is willing to care for, protect and defend.

We love a good, warm-hearted woman. Not one of these simple beauties who are gay, painted, padded, befrixed and befrizzled adornings of fashion without true heart or sterling worth. Such are very nice to look upon-good to flirt withnice to take to the opera, the races, the theatre, or to skirmish with when the coast is clear and willing ones seek for adventure; but they den't wear for keeps like the good, plain, sensible women who have hearts and whose worth is more than pen or tongue can tell.

Women would be better and happier if men loved them better and were more true to them. If men would strive as much to make home happy as they do to seek happiness elsewhere, the world would be better.

Hours do come when men admit the power and worth of woman. Not in sunshine so much as in shade and storm .on the sea of success, we too often forget the ones without whom life would be a blank, and only fly to the havens and shelters-the love and gentle caresses of remain abroad is to perish.

AFFAIRS AT WASHINGTON.

Correspondence of the Journal of Commerce. Washington, September 15. In Washington there is a distinction between government and private business, as there is in other places; but the distinction here is lifferent from that elsewhere. In dealings with individuals men are expected to be honest, but in dealings with the government that man is termed foolish whose conscience will not permit him to take all he can get. A grocer in Washington will sell the government a few gross of matches and charge in the bill as though they had been bought at retail, one box at a time. The same rule applies where large quantities of soap, brushes, brooms, and every article of supply not contracted for is purchased. Still, the fact is not considered against the When engrossed in business, and rolling grocer.
