

To Young Men.—You are the architects of your own fortunes. Rely upon the great strength of your own body and soul. Take for your motto, self-reliance and industry; for your star, faith, perseverance and pluck, and inscribe on your banner, "Be just and fear not." Don't take too much advice; keep at the helm and steer your ship. Strike out. Think well of yourself. Fire above the mark you intend to hit. Assume your position. Don't practice excessive humility; you can't get above your level—water don't run up hill—put potatoes in a cart and over a rough road, and the small ones will go to the bottom. Energy, invincible determination, with a right motive, are the levers that move the world. The great art of commanding is to take a fair part of the work. Civility costs nothing and buys everything. Don't drink; don't swear; don't smoke; don't gamble; don't steal; don't deceive; don't tattle. Be polite; be generous; be kind. Study hard; play hard. Be in earnest. Be self-reliant. Read good books. Love your fellow-men as your God; love your country and obey the laws; love virtue. Do what your conscience tells you to be your duty, and leave the consequences with God alone.

COLLEGE'S FOOTBALL.—I knew a nice old farmer who never had a paper in his house till he was fifty years of age. His father left him 200 acres of choice land, which he worked as well as he knew how, and made a comfortable living. One spring the postmaster told him that if he would subscribe for an agricultural paper, read it carefully, and work according to instructions, that he would warrant him to clear a thousand dollars that year. On these conditions he paid for the paper. He read it faithfully, and at the end of the year he cleared $969. He sued the rascally postmaster for the other $40, but by some dodge of the law the villain cheated him out of it. Ever since then the old gent has been down on postmasters and newspapers. [Harold New York.

CURIOSITIES OF SOUND.—The only condition necessary to the production of a musical sound is, that the air pulses should succeed each other in the same interval of time. No matter what its origin may be the sound becomes musical. If a watch, for example, could be caused to tick with sufficient rapidity—say 100 times a second—the ticks would lose their individuality, and blend to a musical tone. And if the strokes of a pigeon's wings could be accomplished at the same rate, the progress of the bird through the air would be accompanied by music. In the humming bird the necessary rapidity is attained; and when we pass on from birds to insects, where the vibrations are more rapid, we have a musical note as the ordinary accompaniment of the insect's flight. The pulls of the locomotive at starting follow each other slowly at first, but they soon increase so rapidly as to be incapable of being counted. If this increase should continue until the pulls numbered fifty or sixty a second, the approach of an engine would be heralded by an organ peal of tremendous power.—Lyndall on Sound.

UNDER ROME.

Excavations and explorations of Pagan Rome—the buried city which lies beneath Christian Rome—have for some time been carried on under the personal direction of the Pope. The results of these explorations have been of the highest interest.—The predecessor of the present Pope—Gregory XVI—did not little in the same direction. During the time of Gregory, the monumental facade of the Claudian Aqueduct was cleared away from the rude works thrown up against it in some ancient siege, and its magnificent proportions were fully disclosed. In the progress of this work a Roman tomb was discovered beneath the rubbish, erected to the memory of a worthy and wealthy baker, Virgilius Etracrae, and his wife.—The tomb was decorated with portrait statues and reliefs illustrating the business which led the deceased to fortune and to honor. A similar work is now in progress at the Marcia Aqueduct, and the whole of its monumental facade is to be cleared away from the fortifications and superstructures of the middle ages, and the Marcian waters are to flow, as of old, to refresh the inhabitants of the Eternal City.

The most valuable of all the discoveries made, however, is that at the ancient wharf of the Emporium, where, buried beneath the accumulated rubbish of more than a thousand years, is an inexhaustible stock of blocks of polished marble of the most costly and rare qualities. The blocks already taken out, some of which are of exceeding beauty, are valued at over $400,000; and as the deposit of these treasures is said to extend down to the left bank of the Tiber, from the Aventine to the Church of St. Paul beyond the walls, it is probable that his Holiness has there a store of almost boundless wealth. Among the masses got recently were a great block of rose-colored Oriental alabaster; another of porphyry, several of giallo antico, and fifteen pieces of African marble, of which only two had been known in Rome. Thirteen pieces of the precious myrrhine, which the ancient Romans prized above all other stones, have also been discovered. [New York World.

A BEAGEL TIGER AT LARGE.

French Mountain, between Glen's Falls, New York, and Lake George, was the scene of a genuine sensation during the sojourn of Campbell's circus and manager at that village last week. At a late hour one night, long after the audience had been dismissed and the canvas pulled down, the watchman left in charge observed a large animal dart across his path and almost instantly vanish in the darkness. Suspecting at once that some one or more of the wild beasts had escaped from their bondage, he hastened to where the cages were corralled, and discovered that the largest of the two elephants had drawn the stake to which he had been fastened and had upset the cage of the Bengal tiger, breaking the doors and bending the bars in such a manner as to allow the animal to escape. To run to the hotel, awaken the elephant driver, and summon all hands was the work of a moment. The elephant was promptly fettered, and diligent search for the truant tiger commenced. The scene was one of indescribable excitement. None but two of the most resolute of the showmen would lead in the search, the remainder followed at a respectful distance, and in the greatest trepidation. The tiger was not long in making known his whereabouts, for the bleating of a calf in pain and terror indicated that his royal highness was satiating his gluttonous appetite on live veal. The leading spirits of the hunt approached, and by the aid of their torches, discovered that the tiger had stricken down a yearling heifer, and was crouched over the dying animal, greedily lapping the blood which spurted from a large wound in its neck. A plan for capture was soon devised, and Mr. Clem. King, the keeper of the tiger, at once set about putting it into practice. He procured a rope, and making a noose in the form of a lariat, he ascended by a ladder from the outside of the shed to a window, from whence he passed to the rafters immediately over the tiger. He then gave a loud shout, which caused the tiger to look upward, giving him an opportunity to throw a lariat over the animal's head, which feat he dexterously accomplished. Drawing his rope taut, he made it fast to a beam, and another rope was passed to him, with which he succeeded in lassoing the tiger in the same manner as before. Mr. King then threw the end of one rope to a party of men near the entrance to the shed, and when they had secured it he threw the end of the other rope to another party, and the two lines were at once stretched, each party walking in an opposite direction. When the tiger would make a rush at one group of his captors, the others would haul taut on their line, and thus prevent him from doing any mischief. After much exertion and several ludicrous stampedes from the bystanders, he was dragged back to his cage, which had in the meantime been repaired. When he came in view of his den he bounded in his own accord, but the attendants, in their haste to secure him, closed the iron door suddenly and severed about a foot of his majestic tail. A LARGE FARM.—Uncle Sam has sold off a great deal of land recently to his children, and he has given away a large number of farms to those who are not too lazy to work them. Uncle Sam will give anybody one hundred and sixty acres of first-class land who will be steady and cultivate it for the next five years. He has between four and five millions of acres in Michigan, which anybody can have for asking and living on it awhile.—The number of acres of land undisposed of on June 30, 1868, amounted to 1,405,366,677, including Alaska. This area, it is calculated, is eighteen times the dimensions of Great Britain and Ireland. The undisposed of land is distributed as follows:
