| dealt in oceasional rothghess of speech, said once in a parlor before ladies, that he would never marry a then New York gitl of fashion, for the class allowed themselves to be handled too much. A girl who protects herself from the freedoms too much in vogue in society, in- creases her value if she only knew creases her value if she only knew it, with those she may have to repulse. I don't believe in prudishness or suspicion, but I do believe when men and women are not con tent with the friendship that can be expressed ly frank, kind eyes and cordial, brief hand shakes, and cle.ar words, one is not ashamed the world should hear, they should know what intoxication they are sharing.  It strikes one curiously to see ladies forget their hands in a man's clasp while they are talking so carnestly; there is a great deal of expression in the nearness of two conversationalists which often tells a little more than people are aware of. It's all right and imnocent, of course, but if people are properly indifferent to each other's hands, why not observe convenances, and drop them when the cordial salute is performed? Younerer see Rev. Mr.Surplice hold any hand in his but that of young Rocket, the curate with the melancholy large black cyes, and you never see grave legal gentlemen crushing the flounces of sters. There is a fine, distinct line between the commerce of good will and heaven-warm affection, that bind the human family together and these leadings of attraction that with nameless license destroy the bloom of refinement.  There is one rule that settles a thousand queries of the nature we cret may be safely left untouched. The touch, the look, the intimacy, the correspondence that needs to be secret, has something wrong |
