

JERUSALEM.

We extract from a letter of a correspondent of the London Standard, the following interesting remarks:

"For four hours our road lay across the plain. We entered a valley at the foot of the range of mountains. In these mountains one fully realizes the description one has read of the barrenness of the Holy Land. Anything more utterly bare and dreary could hardly be imagined. In most places the ridges of limestone lay white and glistening in the morning sun. Not a handful of soil was to be seen, not a blade of vegetation raised its head. All was blank sterility and desolation. Occasionally, however, we came upon hillsides where the ilex and the wild olive were scattered. Nothing is more difficult than to picture these scenes as they were in Scripture times; when a teeming population inhabited them, when these barren hills were covered to the summits with vineyards and oliveyards and olive grounds, when Palestine was a land flowing with milk and honey, and abounding in corn and oil and wine.

"And, yet, impossible as it appears at first sight, such a state of things is quite compatible even with the apparent sterility of these hills. Industry can clothe the most barren hills with verdure. Upon the slopes of the Jura we can nowadays see hills of precisely similar formation covered with vineyards. Each of these limestone ridges which run along the side of the mountain was once a terrace covered with vines. With soil brought from a distance, and kept in its place by artificial walls of stone, these hills might be, and no doubt were, covered with vines and olives to their very summits. With such general vegetation the climate would have been very different to what it is at present. Rain may have fallen frequently, and the heat would have been far less excessive.

"After the almost absolute destruction of the Jewish nation at the time of the fall of Jerusalem, and still more on the occasion of the crushing of the insurrection two hundred years afterward, the change would have begun to take place. Left to themselves the walls which retained the terraces would have crumbled and fallen, and in time the stones and earth would have been washed by the heavy winter rains into the valleys below. So, gradually, the bare rock of the hills would have been exposed as we now see it.

"That these hills are perfectly capable of cultivation was evident enough from the luxuriance of olives and vines near the one or two villages we passed, where a real attempt at cultivation was made. The road is here a very fair one, and far better adapted for carriages than it is when crossing the sandy plain. Some of the ascents and descents are steep, but here zig-zags have been cut. We passed several parties of thirty or forty men at work at these points. This labor is now paid for. The completion of the road is a very great boon to travelers.

"Unnumbered by any baggage and fairly mounted, one may go the distance from Jaffa to Jerusalem in from five to six hours, or less than half the time it formerly occupied. The only village of any size between Ramelah and Jerusalem, is Kirith Jerim, where the ark remained for some years, until taken by David to Jerusalem. It is now called by an Arab name, and has no feature of interest except the ruins of an old convent. It was, until within the last twenty years, a noted place for brigands, who levied black mail upon all passing travelers. The road is now as safe as that between London and Dover.

"I had heard much of the first view of Jerusalem, and as we neared the last crest between us and the city we hurried on in eager expectation. The result was a disappointment to all of us. Between us and Jerusalem, cutting off the greater portion of the view, stands the Russian establishment, which may be described as apparently consisting of two rows of Brighton lodging-houses with a portion of the pavilion. It may be, and no doubt is, an admirable establishment, but it was an act of unpardonable vandalism to overburden Jerusalem with this bran new piece of ugliness. The Marquis of Bute, has, I am told, purchased the piece of ground adjoining for the erection of a Roman Catholic establishment. Scarcely any portion of Jerusalem will be visible from the Jaffa road when this shall have been completed.

The travelers who wish to get the grand impression which the first view of Jerusalem cannot but give, should endeavor to make a detour, even at a considerable loss of time, and to come up from behind Olive or one of the hills upon the east of the city. For Jerusalem, even in its decadence, is one of the most striking cities in the world. Its massive walls have a most imposing aspect as seen from the distance. Its situation upon its two hills, or rather—for the valley between them is filled up and obliterated—upon its one hill, rising abruptly from the valley, is superb; and it is easy to understand that, before the invention of gunpowder, it was considered to be impregnable. It is a theme which would require a volume to do it justice.

"Since the crusades, the Emperor of Austria is the first crowned head who has visited Jerusalem. Such an event should be signalized in some special way. When the Prince of Wales visited the Holy Land he was permitted to enter the Holy Shrine at Hebron, and to look down the slit in the Cave of Machpelah, being the first Christian who for centuries had been permitted to do so. The only further honors which could be permitted to the Emperor of Austria would be to enter the cave itself.

Where is the man that cannot confirm the truth of the following sensible remarks: Woman should be more trusted and confided in as wives, mothers and sisters. They have a quick perception of right and wrong, and, without always knowing why, read the present and the future, read characters and acts, designs and probabilities, where man sees no letter or sign. What else do we mean by "mother wit," save that a woman has a quicker perception and readier invention than man? How often, when man abandons the helm in despair, woman seizes it, and carries the home ship through the storm! Man often flies from home and family to avoid impending ruin. Woman seldom, if ever, forsakes home thus. Woman never evaded mere temporal calamity by suicide or desertion. The proud banker, rather than live to see his poverty gazetted, may blow out his brains, and leave his wife and children to want, protectorless. Loving woman would have counseled him to accept poverty, and live to cherish his family and relieve his fortune. Woman should be counseled and confided in. It is the beauty and glory of her nature, that it instinctively grasps at and clings to the truth and right. Reason, man's greatest faculty, takes time to hesitate before it decides; but woman's instinct never hesitates in its decision, and is scarcely ever wrong where it has even chances with reason. Woman feels where man thinks, acts where he deliberates, hopes where he disbelieves, and triumphs where he fails.—Educational Gazette.

Did you ever think, short as it is, how much there is in it? Oh it is beautiful! And, like a diamond in the crown of a queen, it unites a thousand sparkling gems in one.

It teaches all of us—every one of us, to look to God as our parent; "Our Father."

It teaches us to raise our thoughts and desires above the earth: Who art in Heaven?

It tells us that we must reverence our Heavenly Father: "Hallowed be thy name."

It breathes the saints reward: "Thy kingdom come."

And a submissive, obedient spirit: "Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

And a dependent, trusting spirit: "Give us this day our daily bread."

And forgiving spirit: "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us."

And a cautious spirit: "Deliver us from evil."

And last of all, an adorning spirit: "For thine is the kingdom and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen."

WHY PRINTERS ARE DISAPPOINTED.—A certain typo, whose nose shown in the dark like a lighthouse—the effect of steady and copious libations of stimulants—having been asked why printers were disappointed, astonished the questioner by the following neat answer: When others shunned the murky sky, Where flash on flash were bright'ning, Great Franklin went to fly his kite, And bottled up the lightning.

And since his time, when cares oppress, And hard times are tightening, The Printer seeks to drown his woes In draughts of "bottled lightning."

When badly tattooed—his warm heart A place for grief to rankle in— He takes his "lightning" flies his kite, And thinks himself a Franklin.

To a toast of "The babies! God bless them," a railway conductor responded: "May their route through life be pleasant and profitable, their ties well laid, their track straight forward, and not backwards. May their fathers be safe conductors, their mothers faithful tenders, and their switch never mislaid."

Good thoughts are companions; often our best.

A Kentucky paper thinks that the word croquet is too Frenchy, and proposes that the game which it designates be hereafter called "Presbyterian billiards."

A celebrated wit was asked if he knew Theodore Hook? "Yes," replied he, "Hook and eye are old associates."

It is said that a dog taken in its infancy and held three-quarters of an hour under water, will never be troubled with hydrophobia.

It is stated that the Hon. Horace Greeley is not only a pillar of the Rev. Mr. Chapin's Church, but one of its soundest sleepers.

And now comes Jenkins, who asserts Anna Dickinson wears "palpitators." How does he know?

If you would not have affliction to visit you twice, listen at once to what it teaches.

There is one excuse for impudence, and that is ignorance.
