Editorial Correspondence.

SALEM, Sept. 28, 1870. The Legislature has not done much since our last letter. No bills of importance have been introduced in either House, but considerable work has been done in the committee rooms, and when their labor is completed and ready to be reported back to the House, work will be actively carried on. The House has appointed a committee on the Penitentiary, which we learn is in a very miserable and unhealthy condition, and needs some necessary legislation. Notice has been given in the House of a proposed introduction of a bill to appropriate money for the erection of an asylum at this place. While we would like to see all our State buildings erected, it will certainly strike the Legislature that our financial condition will not adwhat diligence, falsehood and perfidy the mit of any such appropriations at this ses- is hourly looked for.
