The Tariff Question.

The Radical press, us a rule, has taken · side in favor of what they term a " protective tariff." and on this issue will the next Presidential campaign be fought. The Democracy@ on the other hand, hold that a high tariff is against the best interests of the masses, and oppose any tariff further than the actual want of the Government require, and not for protection. The advocates of the present tariff system assume the false position that if the tariff is removed, it will cause a total breaking up of our manufacturing interest and a decline in the wages of the laboring classes. To this argument we need only refer back to the time when the tariff was not for protection, but for revenue. It is true that the New England manufacturers and extortionists would be injured by the abolishment of the tariff, but it would be counter-balanced by the benfits that would enure to the other sections of the Union. The masses of the American people are consumers and not manufacturers. If the cost of living is reduced one-half, labor can be reduced without doing an injury to the laboring classes. But under the present protective system, capital and the manufacturer receive protection while labor and the producer are placed at their mercy. Capital regulates the price of labor, and while the capitalist is protected by high tariff, labor is not, nor is the producer. The manufacturer procures the cheapest labor he can obtain, and has a protection for the price of his goods by boring to pay for the luxury of Radical the Government, which places such high tariff on imports as to virtually prohibit competition. If it is just to thus protect the price of the manufagurer's goods, it a is nothing more than justice that the producer and laborer should be protected in the price of his products or labor. To illustrate how this protection works
