MEMORIES OF ME.

When other smiles shall woo thee, And pleasures still pursue thee ; When hope's bright dreams have vanished Across life's marshy lea-like strains of music stealing, Unto thy soul appealing With every tender feeling. Will be memories of me.

And when at eve thou rovest With some one whom thon lovest Perchance there'll come a moment. When thy heart will yearn to be With her who once carressed thee, Ah! truer love ne'er blessed thee, Nor fonder arms e'er pressed thee ; So give one tear to me.

Yet not in grief nor anguish. 1 00 But kindly, and with pleasure. Think of all our happy days-Of hours that fled so gladly, Hijoyed by us so madly. That e'en their memory sadly Brings thoughts of love and me.

> Oh! wilt thou then remember As fades the dying ember. When life no longer lingers In the once bright, sparkling fame, That none e'er loved so dearly, As she, whose name has merely sistible contact with the home? Perhaps the most melancholy truth of the times is, that abuses and perversions of the dominant political party have brought about ages, notwithstanding the earnest repetition of all abstract theories healthy instincts of both sexes continued to divide the work assigned to the beautiful, the ruder to the strong. But now, a new argument is advanced.

It ought to burn the dishonest cheek of the political impostors who, under color of doctrines they never believed in, having degraded suffrage in this country. In the convention, on Thursday-Miss Adele Hazlett drew a harrowing picture of the injustice of men towards women, and scornfully informed the male portion of the ject. audience that while they had inise or packages and freight of whatever des | franchised the ignorant Chinapian siption to any part of the city, will be exe- and negro, for their own setilsh ends, they kept their mothers, wifes, daughters, and sisters crouching at their feet in a degraded serfdom. This, then, is the whole secret and spring of the threatened innovation, and, as presented, it logieally compels those who have degraded and outraged the high privilege of suffrage, to accept the argument or confess their hppocrisy.

A PERSUASIVE WIFE.-A correspondent of the Denton Menitor says a handsome, dashing woman, rode into a village in that region, a few days ago, and alighting from her horse, went rapidly to a drinking saloon, where a number of sovereigns were having a "high time." She singled out the finest looking man in the crowd, walked up to him, seized him by the arm and ordered him to put down the glass he was about to drain. He dashed down the glass and rushed away. The lady followed, and finally cornered him in the billiard-room, And they was laughin and talkin; She told him, in a firm, determined voice, that the place he was ih and the course he was pursuing would not answer for her husband; that he was wasting her property, and that she would no longer consent to be disgraced and impoverished by him. She demanded his pistol. He refused. She took it from him, cocked it, and presented it at him, and told him he must leave or die. He concluded to leave. She marched him out as a lar cat. But, by gosh, he missed prisoner of war to where his horse was hitched, ordered him to mount, and in a few minutes the two were leaving town, the wife riding in the rear of her captured ord, with his six-shooter in her hand.
