

The Home Paper.

It may not be the greatest and best in the world, but take it and read it over carefully; note every item of news contained therein, for there are things that we may learn in an hour as they transpired yesterday in another country. While there are a thousand things which mark the growth of man's intellect, and contribute to the dissemination of knowledge, there is no one thing that so largely contributes to it as the country press. Each issue is a harvest thought; the world is the field; the seasons come and go with each day it steps out from the unknown future, makes its impression on the Book of Time, and passes on to the record past. Take the paper that is published nearest your home; spread it out before you and see how the world's doings are drawn within its focus; through this lens you behold city and town, river, lake and ocean, the country, state and nation. The men who are moulding the history of the day are pictured out before you; the unfortunate poor are made known to you. No man can read that paper thoughtfully without benefit. It will broaden his mind, quicken his intellect, deepen the channels of thought and feeling that lead from brain to heart, and find expression in action. The person who reads his newspaper becomes familiar with the world, a well informed man, developed to suit the age in which he lives. He who does not read is but a grown up child, his mind, compared with the man who does, is like his baby life measured by the life of Methuselah. To the children of those who will not take a paper we would say, if you wish to become men who can command the respect of your neighbors, and occupy a position in life worthy of a man, take the home paper and read it.

Newspapers are the great instructors of the people. They are making this age a remarkable one, on account of the general intelligence which exists among the masses. They are published so cheap, that the poorest can afford to take them—and the owner of a cabin derive as much benefit from them, so far as general information is concerned, as the denizen of a costly mansion. They are the best friends of the people, and should be liberally sustained by them.

Newspaper men all have the enterprise to publish neat, creditable papers, and they strain every nerve to do this—but the people don't second their efforts. They don't consider that the size and appearance of their country newspaper is a pretty fair index of their own intelligence and enterprise—that it shows by its face, every issue, whether it is starved or well supported. There is no class of people who do half as much for the general good, or who work so hard as newspaper men. Many of them are put to all kinds of expedients to get along, when there are hundreds of influential men who are greatly benefited by the paper, who do nothing, comparatively speaking, to sustain it. These same men might easily speak a good word for it; get their friends to subscribe for it; sustain it with their advertising patronage, and help build up a paper that would be a credit to their country—and thus remunerate also a hard-working man. Every citizen of a country ought to be more to think of doing without his paper than without his meals. He ought to be animated by sufficient pride, if by no other motive, to sustain it, and thus see it a worthy representative of the people.—New Jersey Mechanic.

Cleveland, Ohio, has a sensation—a loyal one. For some weeks past a highly intelligent contraband has been wandering through the streets at night, committing terrible outrages upon unprotected females. The last case is that of a lady sixty years of age, Mrs. Campbell, who was choked to insensibility and nearly killed before the purpose of the black villain was accomplished. If the administration does not take better care of its pets there will be a Klux-Klux organization in Cleveland before long. Then will come a Congressional investigating committee for the people to pay.—Pomperoy's Democrat.

Not "Jim" Nye.—Somebody is curious to know, says the San Joaquin Republican, if "Bill Nye," whom the heathen Chinese swindled in a game of poker at Table Mountain, is any relation to the Grey Eagle of Nevada. The querist doesn't know Jim Nye, or he would never have asked that question. Why, he played a little game of draw with the Government at Washington, made a saw mill bluff, and got away with a forty thousand dollar pot. The beauty of the play was that he made it after the draw on no pair, and shot his mouth off on the saw mill. No heathen Chinese can beat Jim Nye, nor any of his relatives.

The fall of a large mass of rock between Heidelberg and Wisconsin, in Germany, has brought to light the works of a silver mine which was known to the ancient Romans. There is no silver ore of any importance left, but a very rich zinc ore is met with in large quantities.

An Iowa paper has a correspondent writing against capital punishment, and signing his name, "One who has been there."
