MILITARY LIFTS SEATTLE BAN

Camp Lewis Soldiers Allowed to Visit City After Obtaining Pass

CAMP LEWIS, TACOMA, WASH.

CAMP LEWIS, TACOMA, WASH., Jan. 9.—Although the military ban on Seattle was officially lifted today it will be necessary for soldiers who wish to visit Seattle to obtain a special pass permitting them to go beyond the 20-mile circle drawn about the camp shortly after the ban was placed on Seattle.

As soon as the ban had been suspended the military police guards who had been stationed at the docks and electric and railway stations to prevent soldiers visiting Seattle were withdrawn.

The use of the word "suspended" was interpreted at camp to mean that the men would be allowed to visit Seattle as long as the city remained free of organized vice and that the ban would be clamped down again should conditions warrant it.

A new recreation hall is to be erected at once at Camp Lewis by citizens of Tacoma, according to a telegram received this afternoon by citizens of Tacoma, according to a telegram received this afternoon by Captain T. G. Cook, camp athletic director, from A. J. Davis, president of the First National bank, Butte.
