Two Notables Heard at Club
Dr. Joshua Stansfield and M. P. Burs Address Methodist Gathering

Rev. Joshua Stansfield, pastor of the First Methodist church of Portland, and M. P. Burns of Philadelphia, head of city mission work for the Methodist Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, were speakers at the meeting of the Six O'clock club of the First Methodist church last night.

Dr. Stansfield was for sixteen years pastor of a Methodist church in Minneapolis, having lived in that city, according to Dr. Avision, when the people would have nothing to do with the New Testament because it spoke of St. Paul.

The message of Dr. Stansfield set forth an inspiring vision of the modern aspects of Christianity. Civilization, he said, was a matter of concepts. Religion consisted most truly in the recognition of God as the father rather than as the king or ruler. The biggest thing in the Christian religion was the realization of the incarnation of the divine in the human—the vital rather than the official relation. When Rome captured the Christian religion the dark ages followed.

The Methodist church formerly had twenty-nine articles of faith. Wesley reduced the number to twenty-five and would have reduced them further. The speaker ventured that no two persons in the hour would quote two of them, the reason for which was obvious.

Ideals Are Changed. The rapid changes in life concepts were noted by the speaker; the competitive business concepts of the recent past was every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost in religion. It was to save one's own soul. All, he said, were tarred with the same stick. In the early life of the country the forefathers first fell on their knees and then on the oblong (knees).

"They landed first on Plymouth Rock," he said, and then on every other place in sight. "Up to forty years ago there was in print no life of Christ. There was much law and doctrine presumably based on his sayings, but there was nothing devoted to his spirit, his manner, his ways, his life. Now there are many and some of the first and finest were written by non-Christians who, in their writing, did a great service. Now it would be impossible to get up a controversy among thinking people on the subject of election and selection, etc. New movement now follow each other in rapid succession. There is a new Christian interpretation of which service is the key note. Some of the new departures are foolish but fine. Henry Ford's pace movement was not a very wise one but it was wonderfully fine. It was truly splendid that a man of his standing would come forward boldly with such an ideal and give his time, money and energies to its realization.

World Situation Mentioned. To all this the speaker attributed the wonderful rise of democracy and although the war is sometimes referred to as an indication of the failure of Christianity, the speaker interpreted it as but the real culminating struggle of right against wrong principles in which he saw every indication of results that would be far-reaching for ultimate and crowning peace such as the world has never known.

Mr. Burns spoke briefly on the world situation and how America is regarded as the hope of the world, quoting Chinese, Japanese and other

MORE PRAISE FOR RED CROSS
Willamette Chapter's Organization Is Best Known to State Chairman Chapman

The organization of Red Cross work under Willamette chapter, with headquarters in Salem and embracing the counties of Marion and Polk, is the most complete of all Red Cross organizations within the knowledge of the state chairman of the recent big membership drive, C. C. Chapman, editor of the Oregon Voter.

In a letter just received from the state chairman by Willamette chapter, he says: "I have received your big list of names of chapters, branches and auxiliaries and am simply delighted to note what a complete organization Marion county has. It is more complete than anything of the kind that I have seen."

In proof that the local chapter lives up to its reputation in "works" also, the secretary, Mrs. Rollin K. Page, responds to Mr. Chapman as follows: "I wonder if it would be of interest to you to know that we have shipped from this chapter about 72,000 finished articles? About 20,000 of these are gauze surgical dressings, represents hospital garments such as pajamas, bed shirts, knitted socks and other articles requiring a large amount of work. Our outlay is only $35 a month with the stenographer the only paid officer. Our rent and all other incidental expenses are donated. We are proud of the organization we have developed and of the substantial interest which is behind the Red Cross in this territory."

foreign statesmen, in whose judgment the world is looking to America. He spoke of the cost of the war in multiplied billions to say that one-fourth the amount expended in time in the incalculable of the spirit of America into the belligerent nations would have made the war impossible. It was the object of Mr. Burns to hold a conference with Methodist men on the big efficiency program just being inaugurated throughout the country, particularly in the cities. The conference extended for an hour after the adjournment of the meeting. Many very interesting features of the new program were discussed.
