

OLCOTT MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT OF CANDIDACY

If Elected, Will Resign and Allow Withycombe to Name Successor

PRINCIPLES OUTLINED

No Campaigning Tours Over State Are Planned by Aspirant

BEN W. OLCOTT.

Ben W. Olcott, secretary of state, yesterday made formal announcement of his candidacy for the Republican gubernatorial nomination at the primary election to be held Friday, May 17.

Three Names Mentioned. Olcott's term expires in January, 1921. E. E. Brodie of Oregon City will be a candidate for the office in the election of 1920.

Mr. Olcott's decision in this regard now arouses speculation as to whom Governor Withycombe should appoint as secretary of state.

Mr. Olcott's statement follows: Patriotic Sacrifice Urged. I shall be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor at the primary election to be held Friday, May 17.

For Skins Affected by Winds and Weather

This is the season when the who would have a spotted, itchy, watery complexion should turn her thought to mercurochrome.

state business; from the highest office to the lowest, so those who pay the taxes may get full value for the sums they are contributing to maintain the state government.

"To accomplish this will be the employment of practical patriotism and will meet in state government that which is being urged so strongly upon each citizen of the nation.

"There is no reason why every department of the state government should not be conducted on absolutely efficient lines, and if I am elected governor I shall make it my business to infuse business economy and business efficiency into the many departments and commissions which come under the direction of the chief executive.

"The state is similar to a large business corporation. It is the people's corporation. A private corporation, unless backed by unlimited resources like the state, would not long survive if it did not have at its head a man who fully devoted his time and capabilities in applying business judgment and business economy to its affairs.

"Because all state business flows through the office of secretary of state, no office affords such intimate knowledge of state affairs as does it. This office I have held for the last seven years. The knowledge and experience thus gained will be of immense value to a chief executive.

For Law Enforcement. The people of Oregon have emphatically voiced their sentiment in favor of prohibition, and if I am elected governor I shall consider it my duty to use the power of that office to see that the laws are enforced. And if, while I am governor, the dry amendment to the federal constitution, providing for national prohibition, is submitted to the states for ratification I shall give my endorsement and urge its speedy approval by the Oregon legislature.

As the proper performance of my duties as secretary of state requires my undivided personal attention, I shall spend no time campaigning over the state. The people of the state are paying me a salary to look after their business, and I cannot properly do this when away from the office.

OFFICIALS ANNOUNCE UNION IS EFFECTED

This one transaction, which we have been working on for more than sixty days, makes it certain that Salem will remain the center of the loganberry juice business of the entire country.

Three Famous Brands Marketed. A statement issued by the officials of the new company says: "Just as the government today is operating railways for the sake of effecting economy and efficiency of service, so have the strong companies in the national marketing of Oregon loganberry juice found it an essential and practical measure.

The Pleasant Northwest Products company will market Phyl, Lola and Applu, the three nationally advertised and sold products of the two parent companies, with large advertising space in the big national magazines, as well as advertised by local campaigns throughout the country.

General offices of the company will be located in Salem. Branch offices will be maintained in New York City, Chicago, Atlanta, Kansas City, Dallas, Denver and San Francisco. It will be the fixed policy of the company to keep a personal representative in all market sub-divisions of the country, to the end that their products will be kept constantly before the wholesale and retail trade.

"This move that brings together the two big factors in the loganberry and fruit juice industry is one that will mean much to the Pacific northwest. Back of the new company will be adequate finance, and the most modern and best equipped plants in America for the production of fruit juices. The main plan for the production of loganberry juice is at Salem. Auxiliary plants will be located at Woodburn, Forest Grove, Orenco, Falls City and other points throughout the loganberry belt, which will enable the company to secure a maximum output of this now famous beverage.

"At Olympia is located the plant for producing Applu, the nationally advertised 'drink an apple beverage' and other apple products. The Olympia plant is conceded to be the largest of its kind. Over a million gallons of apple juice have been produced at this plant in a single year. Apples are secured from Wenatchee, Yakima, and other famous fruit districts. During the pressing season an average of twenty-five carloads of apples are used in a day. The juice is stored in 20,000 gallon enamel-lined steel tanks.

"No product has made a place for itself on the national market more quickly than has loganberry juice in three short years. This juice of Oregon's luscious loganberry, with its ruby-red color and crisp, lively flavor, has been accepted worldwide as a delightful, healthful drink. Famous hotels of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and San Francisco, as well as the big dining-car systems of the country, have placed it on their menus. With thousands of better-class resorts and conference centers loganberry juice is now looked upon as the coming fruit juice of the world.

Sales Show Rapid Increase. In 1915, when the juice was first introduced on the market, the total sales of loganberry juice for all companies in the field totaled less than $60,000. In 1916 the total sales for all companies did not exceed $300,000. While in 1917 the total sales amounted to something in excess of $1,000,000, and at least 99 per cent of this sum of money resulted from sales made outside the Pacific northwest.

The story of the loganberry juice industry reads like a romance, when the condition is recalled which existed in the loganberry vineyards just before someone conceived the idea of introducing this beverage. Because of their unusual size and lusciousness, and without the necessary structure for holding the juice loganberries could not be successfully shipped as fresh fruit. Many farmers had ploughed up their vineyards and given up in disgust. But loganberry juice as a beverage caught on instantly, and now the berry is greatly sought after. Farmers have re-planted their vineyards, and the crop of 1918, with favorable weather conditions, will break all records for size.

This consolidation of the two big companies of the loganberry juice industry will mean a standardization of the products, and a concentration of effort that will carry loganberry juice to the very top notch of popularity among fruit juices.

Miss Eugenia Phillips Writes to Parents of Guatemala Shock

DALLAS, Or., Jan. 26.—(Special to The Statesman.)—Pears that Miss Eugenia Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Phillips of this city, might have been killed in the earthquake that did damage in Guatemala last month, were dispersed this week when her mother received an interesting letter from her telling her that she was safe and describing in detail the earthquake. Miss Phillips, who is a missionary to Coban, Guatemala, stated in the letter that she spent several hours in the open air during the time of the earthquake as many of the houses in their city were falling in, killing the inhabitants. She stated that there were twenty-six distinct shocks and that there was a continual rattling of windows during the entire time.

Miss Phillips was formerly a teacher in the Dallas schools and left last summer for Coban, where she will remain for several years as a missionary. In her letter she described the wedding that took place there between a native beauty of high birth and a titled German. Among other things she told about buying turkeys for 6 cents a pound, which is considerably lower than the price paid for the famous bird in this country.

CANADIAN HERO TO TALK IN SALEM

There is a man coming to Salem who has gone through the hell of the war, who has contributed to the hell of the war, who has escaped from the hell of the war, and comes back, minus one arm, to tell of it. His name is Pte. W. E. Collinge, and he will talk at the Liberty theatre on Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 20 and 21, illustrating his lecture with war pictures released by the Canadian government. In Canada Collinge is well known. Tales of his heroism have been seized by the newspapers and published from coast to coast.

But it is not of his personal achievements that Pte. Collinge will talk. He is not on a mission of self-applause. He is telling the United States the real facts about the war, picturing it so graphically that every man and woman who hears will be able to picture his or her son surrounded by the war; to visualize war; to know the details of warfare.

BITS OF ADVICE ON HEALTH.

Eat and drink moderately in order that you may do so tomorrow. Personal cleanliness is more than a luxury—it means health. life. "The Old Oaken Bucket, the Moss-covered Bucket" will do to sing about—the wise man will avoid closer relationship. Don't open the window and then block the fresh air with the shade. Let the air in. Keep the shade up. Underfeeding is bad—overfeeding is worse. Bathing is not luxuries—they are necessities. Good health is the best form of life insurance. Closed windows are open avenues to consumption. In building your reputation for civic pride commence in your back yard. Little scars on the arm save many on the face—be vaccinated. If garbage is thoroughly drained in the kitchen sink, before being placed in the garbage can, it will become less offensive—provided always that the can has a tight cover.

The pneumonia season is approaching. Pneumonia is a communicable and preventable disease. Therefore, if prevented, there will be no sequel or undertaker. Pure air or open-air treatment does not mean a few hours daily, but it means twenty-four hours a day.—Bulletin Los Angeles Health Department.

POURING LIQUIDS FROM A PITCHER.

In pouring liquids from pitchers, teapots, etc., if it runs down the side, causing it to spill onto the tablecloth or table, the annoyance may be overcome by greasing the edge over which the liquid flows with a little butter. This breaks the capillary attraction between the liquid and the container.
