

Submarines Come With Thaws and Trawlers Search Face of Ocean

HIDE AND SEEK PLAYED

Seals and Grampus Witness Exciting Games Among Ice Floats

LONDON, Feb. 28 - (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)-One side of the world war that is little heard of, and yet which has furnished some stirring incidents is the life of the British navy in the Arctic. A graphic description is contained in an official account of experiences of naval men stationed at or near Archangel. It says:

The long winter night of four months is drawing to a close. The moon, which each month has gone visions before reaching land. round in a circle for five days at a time without setting, no longer absorbs our attention. The rosy noonday light has each day brightened amnog the ice-floes further north, and whitened perceptibly, and now and many were the exciting games each twenty-four hours we see for of hide and seek played in those pure guess work. Today brought a short period the sun low down still water, with only the seals and over the southern bills.

Some do not arrive at all-then the trawlers search the face of the travelers and bring in a remnant of VINOL MAKES ocean, and bring in a remnant of starved and frost-bitten crews who have been exposed for days in open boats to the fury of an Arctic springtime. Sometimes they are not found and sometimes the U-boat herself meets the fate she has prepared for others.

The formidable "tank" is an out cropping of the automobile indus try. The new Liberty motor was de signed almost overnight by automo bile engineers and built forthwith in automobile factories. On it we place our hopes of final supremacy and now in the face of an ever-in creasing submarine menace the auto mobile engineer has designed and 1 building in quantities a destroyer which will surely defeat the piracy of Germany on the seas.
