VOLUNTEERS FOR WORK RESPOND

Many Applications Are Received at Office of Labor Representative.

J. R. Coleman, representative of the department of labor who is in charge of the office recently opened on State street, is gradually meeting with response from the working classes in the effort to mobilize an army of berry pickers and farm laborers. The fruit unions, the Pheasant Northwest Products company and the larger berry growers are cooperating in the matter of information with the commercial club and the committees in charge of the Boys Working reserve.

Inquiries are coming in every hour of the day from various sources. Up to closing time last night about sixty-five boys and young men had been enrolled in the boys reserve, a large proportion of them expressing a preference for work in the local plants. Disappointment awaits the greater number of these, for the canneries and other plants will use but a small number of boys on their force. The great demand is with the berry growers, and special attention is being given to securing the army of pickers necessary to harvest the crop promptly.

Mr. Coleman realizes that the campaign has been started several weeks later than it should have been in order to meet all requirements, and he urges that the local public get behind the movement both as a matter of patriotism and business policy. He holds that labor needs should be supplied as far as possible from the home population and the resources of Portland be drawn upon only to work in the fruit yards may not pay quite as liberally as wage positions in towns, but wage positions are comparatively few, and the berry camps promise healthy, happy employment in congenial surroundings. And so far as the boys are concerned the fact should be impressed upon parents that every effort will be made to place the boys in charge of reliable supervisors, who will be expected to exercise discipline as well as care for their well being.

Airplane Trips From England to America Quite Feasible

LONDON, April 30.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press)—Airplane trips from England to America are quite feasible by use of a machine traveling day and night at the rate of 100 miles an hour, declared F. Page, inventor of a type of machine named for him, in a recent statement to the representative of the Daily Express.

"I have received a cablegram from Canada congratulating me on the construction of a machine to travel to and from America, continued the inventor, "but I have no such machine on hand.

"The trip would be from Ireland to New York, via Newfoundland being 1700 miles. An alternative journey to America would be via the Azores. On the steady 100-miles-an-hour basis you can compute all the long-distance runs that occur to you, including week-end trips to China and Peru.

"For short distances, such as London to Manchester, I am not inclined to think that air planes will take the place of railways unless in case of pressing urgency. A comfortable long results of time there are infinite possibilities in the evolution of aviation. "There is an immense future for aircraft as aids to the world's prosperity, but what I call the tourist idea of 'round the world in forty hours' leads nowhere and means nothing. "In the course of time bigger machines will be built with more powerful engines to direct them, but I can see no immediate prospect of turning out airplanes that will carry as many passengers as ocean liners. We must continue to beware of hot air in airplane prophecies."
