Salem Patients Received—

The consignment of patients from the state hospital at Salem was received at the Eastern Oregon State hospital last evening. There was 35 men and 15 women patients. A peculiar feature of this changing of patients is the fact that the Eastern Oregon branch will have to pay the transportation of these patients out of the already small appropriation fund for this work, but Salem, which had an appropriation equal to almost three times the branch is left free of any expense in making the transfer.—Pendleton Tribune.

If Widow Marries, Then What? Asks Mr. Beckwith

In an opinion yesterday Attorney General Brown replies to an inquiry by Harvey Beckwith, chairman of the industrial accident commission as to compensation that should be paid to each of five children of a deceased workman whose widow has re-married. In reply the attorney general says:

"The compensation award is limited to a maximum of $50 a month, which, of course, necessitates a reduction in the amount of compensation paid when there are five children and a surviving spouse to receive compensation. When the widow re-marries she is entitled to ten monthly payments in a lump sum after which her right to compensation ends. At such time, since the payments provided by law of $6 per month for each child would not exceed the established minimum, there exists no reason why each child should not receive the full award of $6 per month."

MILLIONAIRE TO BE SENT TO WAR

Howard Starrett, Lane County Lumberman, Is Placed in Class 1

Howard Starrett, son of the millionaire lumberman of the firm of Starrett& Hovey, has been placed in class one of the draft by the appeal court for the second district of Oregon.

Starrett, who has been in charge of the firm's extensive holdings in Lane county, was originally placed in class one, but was later given a deferred classification upon showing that he was the head of a boom company which would be furnishing large quantities of logs to the mills. The district board has again placed him in class one, because no actual logging operations have been carried on.

Starrett has been in Detroit, Mich., for several months. The board in reclassifying him took the view that he is non-productive .

Starrett, in connection with his first classification in class one, appealed to the president, but the district board had reconsidered its action and placed him in class three before any action was taken in connection with this appeal.

The registrant left Lane county five or six months ago and has since been spending his time in Michigan, where he was taken ill with pneumonia, soon after his arrival in that state.

Mr. Starrett is the head of the Siuslaw Boom company, which was recently granted a franchise for logging operations on the Siuslaw river. This franchise was pending for several months before the Oregon public service commission.

Gale S. Hill's Questions Are Answered by Mr. Brown

A series of questions asked by Gale S. Hill, district attorney for Linn county, relative to taxes in Union high school district No. 2, Linn county, are answered by Attorney General Brown in an opinion written yesterday.

The attorney general answers in the negative the question whether the district can be exempted from paying th regular county high school tax of 7-10 mill. Mr. Hill also wants to know if the county high school tax should not be levied against the property of the district and when collected become part of the county high school fund and disbursed by the county high school board as directed by law. The question is answered in the affirmative. Another question is: "Union high school district No. 2, having been lawfully established, can a school district now in said Union high school district be now included therein?" The answer is affirmative. Another question given an affirmative answer is whether "under article 408, 1917 school laws, is a petition for a union high school district designating a site as a "building to be located at Crawfordsville, Linn County, Or., sufficient?"

"Our Idea of Service" Is Interesting Folder

We recently picked up a little advertising folder, published by the Willard Storage Battery company which impressed us strongly by its evident sincerity. It is called "Our Idea of Service" and is signed by Mr. Willard himself.

One thing he says in his statement seems to sound the keynote of modern, broad-minded, present-day business, "When we are wrong we admit it—when the customer is wrong we must prove it." These sixteen words seem to typify the successful business man—big enough to admit that he may sometimes be wrong and courageous enough to voluntarily accept the burden of proving when he is right.

"And," says Mr. Degge, the local Willard representative, "Mr. Willard not only means every word he says, but he insists that his service stations live up to the standard he sets."

Mr. Willard and the Willard Storage Battery company were among the first to realize the necessity of nation-wide service on important automobile accessories. Willard service stations are now established in all parts of the world—over 1100 of them—and in every one you will find the same high character of service which is given at 418 Court street, right here in Salem.

Dr. O'Neill, Optometrist, Enlists for Naval Service

Dr. C. B. O'Neill, the optometrist, will leave next Thursday to join the hospital division of the navy. He is to report first in Portland and is not sure where he will be sent from there.

His offices in the Ladd & Bush bank building will be in charge of Dr. H. L. Wilson of Portland, who will take care of his practice. Dr. Wilson is a thorough optometrist and is highly recommended by Dr. O'Neill.

Dr. O'Neill has practiced his profession in Salem for nearly four years and has built up a patronage of which any one might justly be proud. He is very enthusiastic in regard to his prospective service in the navy department which he naturally presumes will embody work along the lines of his profession. He will carry with him the well wishes of his many patrons and friends.

AT THE LIBRARY

"The Father of a Soldier" is written by the father of Coningsby Dawson, the author of "Carry On." With growing patriotism he has watched three sons leave for the front.

"My 75," reminiscences of a gunner of a .75 battery in 1914, reveals the French spirit in the war. Paul Lintier pictures vividly the patience, the good humor, the patriotic devotion and simple courage of the heroes who saw the mobilization, the advance into Belgium, the retreat before the oncoming foe, and then the heroic stand before Paris. He fell in March 1916.

"Best Stories of 1917, and the Year Book of American Short Story" is the continuation of the yearly compilation by Edward O'Brien.

"How to Teach" by Strayer and Norsworthy is one of the Teachers' reading circle books and also the basis for state extmination.

"Tree of Heaven" is May Sinclair's new book.

For the Children

"Uncle Sam's Boy at War" tells how an American boy sees the war, Oscar Austin is the author.

"World's Greatest Military Spies and Secret Service Agents" is a group of stories of the spies of all times written by George Barton.

"The Goop Encyclopedia," containing every child's fault, is the newest of Burgess' books for children.

The library is putting out new copies of the old ones as well and borrowing more copies of all so that for once every child who wishes may have a Goop book to read.

The Langworthy charts are on exhibition at the library this week and next. The picture in color the different food content of our most common foods. Now that housewives are expected to talk intelligently in terms of calorie, everyone will find them interesting.
