No Conscription of Men Until Industries Taken

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—The administration's attitude toward conscription of labor was outlined before the Association of Commerce today by Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of labor.

"The time may come," he said, "when we will have to conscript workers in mines, forests and factories, but in the name of democracy these men should not be conscripted until we have first conscripted the places where they shall work. This democracy will not stand for the conscription of men to work for the profit of other men. The conscripted men must work for Uncle Sam and no one else."

INDIAN KILLS THREE

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., Aug. 26.—A posse is securing the hills south of here tonight for Frank Elario, aged 29, a half breed Indian, who ran amuck in the Tejon canyon, and is alleged to have shot to death Alfredo Yucca, aged 30; Mrs. Francesca Lieva, aged 18, and her sister, Isabel Yucca, aged 15. The shooting occurred Sunday afternoon and Elario fled on a horse. Officers said Indians told them that Elario was in love with the elder woman.

WILSON OPENS FESTIVAL

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—Thousands of persons who had gathered tonight at Coney Island for the opening of the week festival arranged by the Knights of Columbus for the benefit of their war camp activities found cheered when President Wilson from his desk at the white house touched a button which illuminated the island. A service flag which was unfurled showed that 123,969 knights had joined the colors.

WEBSTER'S STATUS ATTACKED

Newark, N. J., Aug. 26.—Application was filed in the supreme court here today to set aside the petition of William Grant Webster, candidate for the Republican congressional nomination in the Tenth New Jersey district and who is alleged to be a candidate for the same office in the Tenth district of Illinois. It is charged that Webster is not a bona resident of New Jersey.

Modern American Town in The Shadow of Pisa's Tower

SCHOOLHOUSE IN THIS MODERN ITALO-AMERICAN TOWN

American Red Cross Builds a Cement Village to Care for Refugees.

Rising within the shadow of the tower of Pisa is one of the most modern towns in Europe, and it is an American village—an American Red Cross Refugee village, by the way, built of concrete and with the most approved hygienic arrangements. Where as late as last April an orchard bloomed, this village of cottages, stores and workrooms is springing up like Jack's bean stalk.

Before September it will be a hive of industry for two thousand refugees from the German smash, many of them wives, children and grandparents of Italian soldiers.

The structures already built or under way will house two thousand people, but the plans provide for the erection of homes for three thousand more on the thirty acres constituting the town's site. The neat rows of airy, well lighted cement houses, designed in Italian style by Italian architects, surround

A large central square. A church and modern schoolhouse face each other from opposite sides. A day nursery is nearby, a hospital is on the outskirts, and a large eating house to be operated by the Red Cross is so situated as to be most convenient for all. Elsewhere there are stores, workrooms and workshops fully equipped for various trades and so built as to be an ornament rather than a detriment to this twentieth century suburb of this ancient city. The streets and roads of the village are to be an object lesson to other Italian communities. Its water from the historic Medician aqueduct is so pure that a glass of it will show no sediment after standing a year. Sewage disposal, plumbing and other sanitary facilities are to be as modern as those of an up-to-date American suburb.

The ground for this village, which was requisitioned by the Governor of the province when the American Red Cross agreed to defray the cost of the structures to house the refugees, was formally broken on May 1 by Major Chester Aldrich, representing the Red Cross. Italian architects and workmen, under American leadership, ever since have been breaking all local construction records. Many of the houses now are ready for occupancy, and early in August these two thousand homeless people at last will have a permanent habitation and be given facilities for resuming their old trades.

Model Town to Be Carried on by Women.

It will largely be a woman ruled town. Many of the citizens of this new community will come from Venice, and in the main they will be women. For in Italy every able-bodied man whose work has not already been cut out for him behind the lines is fighting at the front for the women he has left behind him. Therefore, it is a case of the woman who is behind the man who is behind the gun. Many of these women will be home workers by both instinct and training, though almost every class known to the country will be represented. Many of the home industries for which Venice is famed will be carried on under Red Cross encouragement and aid in this modern suburb of Pisa. There will be lace-making and garment making, shoemaking and dozens of other activities, for in selecting the site for the town all these matters had to be borne in mind. Those not engaged in home industries will find ready employment in the factories of Pisa.

This village, however, is only one of the many measures employed by the American Red Cross to protect refugees and families of soldiers in Italy. In practically every village on mainland and islands Red Cross relief is operative. The families of over 300,000 Italian soldiers have been visited and their immediate needs supplied. In co-operation with Italian Governmental and other agencies, workshops, day nurseries, schools, soup kitchens, clothing centers, dry food shops, sewing rooms, factories for the manufacture of shoes and furniture and other needed supplies, orphan asylums, summer camps for children, hospitals and dispensaries have been opened in many places.

Italian relief organizations have been assisted financially to carry on and extend their work to cope with the refugee problem. Everywhere behind the line these activities are adding in upholding the Italian fighters' victory spirit, just as surely as are the Red Cross canteens and rest houses for soldiers on the front line and in the railway depots.
