Liberty Loan Figures Climbing Slowly and Second Visits Are Made

Liberty loan figures climbed slowly yesterday until at 4 o'clock they totalled $743,250, showing that Salem still requires about $257,000 to complete its quota. Slackers are being gone after persistently by one committee after another, in an effort to bring the sum up to the standard set by the rest of the state.

Even though a loan dodger may take a sudden departure from his home he has little chance of evading the solicitors. An example of this is given in the telegram sent the local committee yesterday by W. L. Thompson, chairman of the Pendleton drive. He wired as follows: "I, a wealthy retired farmer rated at $1000, took $500 and left for Gervais in your county. We want him followed and landed. He is a consistent shirker."

The case will be given attention here immediately. A second solicitation conducted by C. B. Webb at the Spaulding Logging company met with much success. He started all over again and within two hours had received pledges for $2790 one man pledging $1050 while several others, who had not taken bonds before, signed up for from $50 to $400 worth each.

LAW COLLEGE MAY CONTINUE

Whether Course Is Maintained This Year Depends on Registration

Whether the law college of Willamette university is to be maintained this year depends on whether a sufficient number of students register in the department to warrant continuing the work this year. It is the experience of many other law colleges in the country that enrollments in the army and navy have cut down enrollment to the extent that the courses in law have been closed down for the present year.

At Willamette some misunderstanding has arisen relative to the place of registration. Dean I. H. Van Winkle said yesterday that it is necessary for all students intending to take the law course to register at once at the university registrar's office in Eaton hall. Formerly the law college has had a separate registration office which was in charge of A. A. Hall, who is now in the adjutant general's office in Portland.

It is necessary to ascertain at once how many are going to take the course so it can be determined whether the course is to be maintained this year. Registration for the law college will begin Monday, but instruction in the department as far as it applies to the military department at the university is now in progress. All law students will be expected to take the military instruction in the course.
