"Hot Meal," Cry Huns, as They Show Coupons
LONDON, Dec. 29.—A story of propaganda that proved a boomerang has reached London from France. In the closing stages of the war when the Germans were surrendering in large numbers, a British intelligence officer was greeted by a group of prisoners with cries of "Hot meal! hot meal!"

The officer showed surprise, but the Germans continued to shout. "Hot meal!" and rub their stomachs. "Nothing doing in hot meals," the officer replied.

Thereupon the Germans pulled out leaflets carefully hidden away in their clothes, and cried, "Ticket for hot meal—ticket!"

The leaflets apparently distributed from the air, informed Fritz that if he came in and surrendered he would get a hot meal.

In brief, military language the British officer told the Germans that he knew nothing about the origin of the leaflets and that there must be a mistake, but the Germans came back with:

"Englishmen always keep their word. Hot meal! Coupon for hot meal!"

According to the story, nothing remained for that British division but to set to work at once and prepare hot food for the hungry prisoners streaming in, thereby considerably slowing the advance at that point of the line.

FEAR OR GERMS?

Seventy-five per cent of the people, over twenty-five years old, have pyorrhea (disease of the gums and bony process supporting the teeth); many of whom are absorbing into the blood, and swallowing, every twenty-four hours, from one to three ounces of pus, that oozes from these diseased tissues; thus bringing about many diseased conditions of other parts of the body. Not twenty-five per cent of these people know anything about pyorrhea and its awful effects. How can fear cause fifty per cent of our adult people to have a disease, that they have never heard of?

Not one person in twenty-five has any fear of a dead tooth. How are the fear exponents to account for more than ninety per cent of all dead teeth becoming infected about the apices (tips) of their roots (usually without any pain about the teeth) with germs, that cause rheumatism, spinal trouble, heart disease, ulcers of the stomach and intestines, appendicitis, tonsillitis, etc?

Most people think crowns and bridges are placed in their mouths to protect and improve their health. Such being the case, surely fear does not account for more than ninety per cent (90 per cent) of all crowns and bridges becoming nesting places for disease germs, that are causing much sickness; and making necessary many hospital operations.

Does persuading the child, by lies, that it "won't hurt," prevent pain when the dentist criminally extracts the tooth without properly anesthetizing it?

Withholding truth from the people about disease and the proper treatment thereof can only profit those who do not wish disease banished from the earth. One of our greatest medical authorities has recently said: About 800,000 people die annually from preventable diseases; and that the chief cause of these deaths is the doctors denying the people the information that is rightfully theirs.

Think of the people suffering with rheumatism, caused by diseased teeth and gums, most of these people have never heard of diseased teeth causing rheumatism; a large per cent of them could be made well and efficient by extracting one or more infected teeth or curing diseased gums. Must we deny these people light because someone may become fearful enough to take the proper course to save his life? While one is scared to death, thousands are dying of neglect and ignorance.

Let the press print "the truth, all the truth, and nothing but the truth" in regard to disease; this is due suffering humanity. "Know the truth and the truth will make you free" from disease.

In my practice I give my patients all the truth, at my command, about diseases of the mouth, and the effect of unclean, diseased mouths, upon the general health—I have no professional secrets. My motto is: 100 per cent clean, healthy mouths, and, as a result, healthy bodies. I do all filling and extracting without pain, by employing methods advocated by the leading dentists and physicians of America. Not simply by telling you to "have no fear."

The Science of Chiropractic

Does not classify the great family of nervous disorders under different heads. It looks to the anatomy of the human system itself to find and adjust the spinal derangements that interfere with the natural action of nerve energy, which proceeds from the brain to every organ, tissue and cell when there is no impediment on any of the nerve lines at the spine. If such obstruction exists, however, there will be disease in the part the compressed nerves reach, from the fact that the proper passage of nerve energy through the fibers is disturbed. By locating and adjusting these conditions the natural forces of the body will restore normal nerve function and effect full recovery from nervous diseases.

CHARACTERISTICS

Nervousness is characterized by various forms of bodily and mental inefficiency. It may be distributed all over the body or confined to a local area or particular spot. Dizziness, headache, flashes, sweating, palpitation of the heart, insomnia, sleeplessness, sexual defects, unpleasant dreams, excitability, moroseness, melancholia, discouragement, worry, dependency, result from pressure against the nerve trunks by displaced joints in the spinal column. Spinal pains, pains at base of skull, inability to eat with relish or work with satisfaction, unrefreshing rest, sensations as of a tight band around the head, burning pains in the pit of the stomach, loss of appetite, flesh or color, twitching sensations, wrinkles, etc., are in nearly all cases nervousness, the cause of which may be definitely located and readily removed, without drugs or remedies, by scientific Chiropractic spinal adjustments.

Italian Villages Rained by Shells from Big Guns

ROME, HEADQUARTERS OF THE ITALIAN ARMY, Dec. 19.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press)

The distressing effects of the war and of Austrian occupation are still evident in the reconquered Italian provinces north and east of the Piave. The country in the vicinity of Oderza, a small village about six miles from the lower course of the Piave, is a scene of utmost desolation. It was here that the Duke of Aosta's army advanced so swiftly and deeply into the Austrian lines as to threaten the communications of the Austrian army occupying Congliano, thus forcing the Austrians to retreat. So intense was the bombardment that very little is left standing in the country all around Oderza. Many of the houses now are merely heaps of debris.

The village of Oderza itself was not so seriously damaged as were the outlying houses as the Italian artillerymen tried to spare it, but it bears unmistakable signs of Austrian occupation. The villagers declare that the Austrians took away not only their church bells but their clothes and even the panes of glass from the windows, the doors, the kitchen utensils and in fact literally everything that could be removed. The parish priest saved some of his household effects and several barrels of wine by hiding them in a barn behind a heap of coffins.

Owing to the fact that the population was greatly weakened by lack of food, the influenza claimed a high per cent of victims. In Oderza, 200 small children were buried in one year of Austrian occupation out of a population of 2400. The condition of the people still is desperate as about half of them are ill with influenza while clothing and food are almost unobtainable.

When the Associated Press correspondent visited Oderza recently there were fifty patients in the civil hospital lying on straw on the floor, without blankets, while the building had neither windows nor doors. The single physician who, with the aid of a few nuns was attending them and had no drugs and his only surgical instrument was his pocket knife.

This situation is said to prevail in nearly all the reconquered Italian districts. The people, it is declared, have virtually nothing and need everything.

Would Start Deer Season Off Later in New Law

Starting the open deer season 15 days earlier is one of the desires of sportsmen of western Oregon, according to Representative Griggs of Douglas county who is a member of the house game committee. The conflict between the laws of the 1917 session as to duck seasons also will probably be settled by this session. Mr. Griggs states, and a number of other minor amendments to the game laws are expected. Senator Eberhard of LaGrande has a number of amendments for his constituents in
