LIFTING THE LID.

Dr. Leo Rice, M. D., Portland, Oregon, says: "There is a considerable number of operative cases, apparently clean to begin with, and handled with faultless technic by skilled surgeons, which terminate with a fatal infection because the patient's buccal (mouth) cavity was overlooked and the patient was allowed to go on the operating table with a septic mouth. And let me say that, unless the doctor with an emergency case, it is our imperative duty to free the mouths of our patients of pus before we allow them to undergo a serious operation. The surgeon who is so anxious to operate and who sends his patient to the surgery without a careful examination of the patient's mouth is, in my opinion, guilty of criminal negligence." —N. W. Dental Journal.

In other words, this noted medical authority says that there are many deaths due to infection from diseased mouths, being carried in the blood to the wounds made by the surgeon's knife. Did you ever hear of a patient's mouth being freed of disease before he is allowed to go on the operating table? In this connection I would suggest an investigation of the awful mouth conditions of scores of people who have undergone serious operations.

In addition to protecting the patient against a fatal infection, it ought to be evident to any doctor that his patient would have a much better chance to recover from a surgical operation if a large part of his resisting powers were not needed to fight a bad mouth infection at the same time.

The majority of major surgical operations are abdominal in character and our greatest medical authorities say that the conditions that are used as an excuse for these operations are mainly due to mouth infection. If the mouth infection was corrected first many of these patients would recover their health with out the hospital operation.

So the only danger of following Dr. Rice's suggestion would be that of losing the fee for one or more operations.

What have you gained, Mr. Doctor, by removing an ulcer of the stomach caused by mouth infection, if the mouth infection is not also removed? Perhaps $200. What has your patient gained? Is it not perfectly reasonable to expect this same mouth infection to cause another ulcer or diseased condition in other parts of the body? Is it not frequently followed by another, when the cause of the first is not removed?

Did you ever stop to think that surgical operations have increased in number in proportion to the increase in the number of dead teeth left in people's mouths and number of crowns and bridges attached to teeth? In other words, the dentists of the country are building the incubators for the diseases that are keeping the surgeons busy while it is being contended that more hospitals would solve the problem of human ills. Give the people all the simple truths concerning disease, then only our present hospitals will be adequate.

Fortunately, many of our people are getting light and having the mouth freed of disease in time to regain health without surgery. I have a number of patients who have been freed from such troubles as rheumatism, intestinal disorders, general ill health, etc., by curing diseased gums and extracting infected teeth. It is a pleasure to refer anyone to these people. I operate without pain by the latest scientific methods; thus giving you better dentistry than otherwise possible, and making it a pleasure for you to have me do your work.

Ptomaine Poison Causes Death of Dallas Soldier

DALLAS, Ore., Feb. 3.—In a letter to his parents in this city William Dennis, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. I. Dennis, states that the death of his brother, Newman Dennis which was announced by the war department last week was caused by ptomaine poisoning and not measles as first reported. Young Dennis was in the hospital at the same time his brother was and was suffering with an attack of rheumatism. Just why the war department should announce that the Dallas soldier came to his death by an attack of measles is puzzling to his relatives here and steps will be taken to have an investigation made of the incident. Newman Dennis was a member of Company L of this city and was the third member of that organization to die of disease since its mobilization.

COUNTY WOULD LOOSE IDENTITY

Multnomah Delegation Wants Legislature to Consolidate Two in One Name

The Multnomah delegation at noon yesterday today voted to have the joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to consolidate the city of Portland and Multnomah county under the name the "city and county of Portland," introduced in the senate by the delegation by request so that the measure may be printed and studied before passed upon by the delegation as a whole. This action was taken upon motion of Representative Richardson, who also embodied in the motion a provision that a public hearing be called in Portland for consideration of the measure. The motion was amended to allow a public meeting to be called if held necessary.

City Commissioner A. L. Barbour appeared before the delegation and pointed out that the city of Portland now pays 3 per cent of the cost of all government in Multnomah county, that business would be facilitated in that there would be but one set of officials to deal with in place of the several at the present time and that the financial saving would be important.

Frank S. Grant told the delegation that the resolution had been subjected to the closest legal scrutiny and that if any changes were made the persons who drafted the measure would desire the privilege of studying the changes. He said that if the constitutional amendment is passed by the voters of the state it will not be self-executing until a charter has been adopted by the people of the city and the county. While the resolution provides that a charter commission shall be appointed any other persons who desire to submit a charter will not be prevented from doing so. Further, he said that under the consolidation there would be no interference with the circuit, county or district courts.

Mr. Barbour explained that under the proposed zoning system of taxation the measure would be satisfactory to the rural population of Multnomah county.

The delegation will amend the bill to raise salaries of district judges in Multnomah county from $2400 to $3600 a year by making the increase to $3000 and the bill will be introduced by the delegation. This was upon motion of Senator Moser.

A bill sent to Salem by the Multnomah county commissioners providing for the creation of a Columbia river interstate bridge commission to be composed of the county commissioners and the district attorney of Multnomah county was brought up, but not considered when Chairman Banks was informed that it already had been introduced in the house.

A house joint resolution sent in by County Clerk Beveridge calling for a constitutional amendment changing the terms of county officials to four years instead of two will not be pushed as a measure of the Multnomah delegation for the reason that it affects all counties. It will be taken up at a hearing at noon tomorrow. At the same hearing, to be attended by Multnomah officials, a bill for regulation of salaries of Multnomah county officials will be taken up and also a protest against the Richards bill providing for election of the Portland school clerk instead of his appointment by the school board.

Representative Richardson was instructed to take up with the highway commission the question of making part of the $2,500,000 under the proposed $10,000,000 road bill available for repair of the Canyon road and the road through Oswego to Oregon City.
