Pronounced Betterment of Industrial Situation Has Marked Effect

NE WYORK, March 6-Pronounced betterment in the industrial situation combined to effect a very substantial recovery on the stock exchange today. The movement attained its widest dimensions in oils, motors and high grade industrials, where gains ranged from 2 to 7 points, but also comprehended rails and coppers. Activity and prices were at highest in the final hour, the entire list extended its gains following publication of Judge Gary's address before the American Iron and Steel Institute, which predicted "large business prosperity. United States Steel, which had shown only indifferent support earlier in the session made a brisk advance of 2 1/4 points, but was overshadowed by several other issues. Sales amounted to 765,000 shares.

The bond market was unusually dull at slight changes, Liberty issues rallying from their early set-Total sales, par value, aggregated $8,750,00. Old United States bonds were unchanged on call, coupon 4's losing 1/4 on sales.

STOCK.

When farmers want to buy dairy cattle they consult their county agent, who, in turn, consults county agents in dairying sections where cows can be purchased. When the county agents of Wisconsin made a summary of sales they had helped to make to buyers outside of that state they found a total of 350 carloads of dairy cattle, valued at $75,000, had been shipped in 18 months since July, 1917. In Winnebago county the records showed 448 dairy cows. ralued at $47.000. In Sheboygan ounty the records showed more than 500 head, valued at $60,000. During this period buyers from 15 states went into Wisconsin to buy stock for farmers in their respective communities.

CHAPTER CCXXXII

WHY DID DICKY SAY, "THE SAME .OLD THING?" TO GRACE DRA-

I do not think one of the group in our living room at Marvin uttered sound for several minutes after AN ELEGANT IMPROVED FARM OF Harry Underwood finished his rendition of "Tell Her I Love Her So."

> The singer himself sat motionless his hands on the keys as he had laid them in the last pulsating note of the wonderful melody. When the spell of his voice faded away I awoke to a shrewd suspicion that the man's pose was a carefully calculated one meant to impress me with the idea that he was lost in the imagery of his own singing. Lillian's eyes were brooding far away. I have studied her enough to know that whatever associations the song held for her, they were not conected in any way with the map connected in any way with the man whom she was yoked in a marriage which she herself described as aparrangement in which they "jogged along very comfortably by each allowing the other the fullest latitude." Grace Draper leaned forward with parted lips and shining eyes but she did not give the singer the compliment of looking toward him. Her gaze was fixed on Dicky, a primitivecompelling look. For once she had forgotten her faultless veneer of manner, and the naked soul of the girl looked out unashamed. I shivered and my eyes went to Dicky's face. I turned them away again instantly, for Dicky's eyes were upon the girl. I could better bear the torture of uncertainty than to read in my husband's eyes, as I feared might, an answer to the unspoken appeal of the seductive creature at his side.

There was real admiration of his wife in them-I told myself that probably I was letting my imagination run away with me concerning both his feelings toward me and Dicky's admiration of Grace Draper. Someway the homely little words of tribute to his wife steadied me, brought me back to sanity. With an effort I leaned forward toward Miss Draper, forcing my voice to cordiality.

"Dicky tells me you have such " wonderful new dance, Miss Draper," I said. "Won't you let us see it?"
