PROF. LOVETT TO REPORT ON THRIPS SURVEY

Expert Scheduled to Appear Before Growers at Fruit Union Meeting Today

INVESTIGATES ORCHARDS

Damage Is Found But Pest May Not Be as Prevalent as First Feared

A. L. Lovett, of Oregon Agricultural college who was in Salem yesterday and who investigated the thrips pest in adjacent orchards, is booked to make a comprehensive report at the meeting of the Salem Fruit union today. He will appear at the noon session and any persons interested, regardless of whether they are members of the fruit union are invited to attend this part of the meeting, as it is considered highly important.

Professor Lovett believes he made a fairly comprehensive survey of the orchards yesterday and believes that the area of thrips infestation is not as wide as has been feared. He said: "While in the limited time at our disposal it is impossible to visit every orchard, a fairly comprehensive serious thrips infestation is not so extensive as we had feared. Probably the infestation is most serious in the Liberty district, continuing northward toward town. North of town the serious attack covers a small area and dwindles to a negligible factor. This is likewise true on the outskirts of the Liberty section. Growers should continue to keep a careful lookout for the pest and be prepared to handle it should it appear.

"In those orchards where the blossoms are so severely blighted that most have dropped and few will open spraying to save this year's crop would be of little value. Generally the thrips are leaving these wholly blighted orchards, flying to adjacent later blooming prunes or cherries. To prevent this migration it would appear in some instances advisable to spray.

"Again, based on our observations of one day, we find but few thrips in the open blossoms and practically no injury taking place. Frequently in the buds of the same trees, the infestation is extremely high and considerable injury and blighting occurs. Therefore, it seems advisable to follow this rule; if considerably less than half the blossoms are out and thrips are present, spray. If one-half or more of the blossoms are out, theoretically these will remain unharmed and unless the thrips are unusually abundant it is probably of questionable value from a crop standpoint to spray now.

"Cherry trees adjacent to infested prune trees are usually becoming infested. Where this condition occurs, basing your decision also on the rule regarding bloom above, spray.

Occasional orchards south of town located at a slightly greater elevation than adjacent orchards, therefore, not so far advanced, failed to show the serious injury of the adjacent tracts. Generally however, thrips were found present. Their numbers will increase by the addition of migrating thrips from the severely blighted orchards. For these orchards generally, by all means spray now.

"This covers briefly the varying conditions and problems confronting the growers. Finally for the majority it will become an individual matter for final decision. Use your best judgment and seek sane advice and in case of doubt probably a safe rule will be spray."

REPORT MADE ON HIGHWAYS

Lee L. Gilbert and Frederick Armstrong Tell About Roads to Roseburg

Lee L. Gilbert, Elgin Six distributor and Frederick Armstrong, factory auditor, who returned yesterday from an auto trip as far as Roseburg, make the following report of the condition of the roads:

"From Salem via Independence and Corvallis the roads are in excellent shape and the farmers are to be commended for their apparently untiring efforts to keep their highways in fit shape for the traveling public. Where any depressions are they have filled in with gravel and other materials resulting a roadway that can be recommended for the public who wish to have a ride of pleasure on a smooth road. From Corvallis to Monroe the road is also very good.

"Monroe to Junction City is rather bumpy and the road is full of chuck holes but by driving at a slower rate of speed can be negotiated without any serious trouble. From Monroe to Eugene, with the exception of a few hundred feet, the road is also extremely good for this time of year, and with the aid of tractors and scrapers is being rapidly whipped into good shape.

"From Eugene to Cottage Grove and Springfield the road is fairly passable, but from there on words
