

Mother, Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine

Any Woman who Tires Easily is Irritable, Nervous and Run-Down, Should Take Nuxated Iron to Help Increase Her Health, Strength and Vitality.

"There can be no strong, healthy, beautiful, rosy-cheeked woman, without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and Medical Author. I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their nervous, run-down, haggard-looking women patients. Pale, thin, nervous, irritable, dependent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the run-down from their chasms.

The Child's Appeal

What Is Your Answer? In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, eggs, farina, dehydrated cornmeal, so long as iron is to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cooking, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss. Therefore you should supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would salt when your food has not enough salt.

people who were sipping at the table have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form and this, after they had in some cases been going on for months without getting benefit from anything. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron sulfate, or lactate of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature (in the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, also, not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless.

CHAPTER CCLXVI
WHY KATIE FELT SHE HAD A RIGHT "TO HAVE A MAN IN THE KITCHEN."
"Margaret! Wake up!" My mother-in-law stood beside my bedside gently shaking me. I felt as if I had been asleep for hours, although the night light streaming in from the hall illuminated the face of my little clock and showed me that it was only 12 o'clock.
It was the first evening Mother Graham and I had stayed alone since the Underwoods had left us. Dicky had gone into town to a men's theatre party and supper, and had told us not to expect him until the 2 o'clock train.
"What is the matter, Mother Graham?" I whispered back.
"I think there is someone in the kitchen," she returned, still in the same low voice. "Put on your kimono and slippers and come down with me."
"Shall I call Katie?" I asked, as I slipped on the articles she had indicated.
"What's the use?" my mother-in-law returned tartly. "She would on-real burglar were in the house, but I said nothing and followed my mother-in-law's trail, stately figure down the stairs and through the lower hall to the kitchen door.

Before I reached it, however, I was convinced that the intruder, whoever he was, was no burglar. A bright light streamed through the cracks of the door into the hall, and the smell of boiling coffee was in the air, and we could hear a low rumbling, masculine voice. Then a feminine giggle struck my ears, and I realized the truth.

Katie must be in the kitchen entertaining some masculine caller, most probably Jim. I would have turned back and reproved the girl for the lateness of the hour the next day, but my mother-in-law was made of sterner stuff.

She threw the door open suddenly but noiselessly, and a most unexpected picture was presented to us.
The kitchen was brilliantly lighted and the kitchen table was spread with one of my small luncheon cloths. On it was spread a goodly portion of the remnants of the roast left from dinner, together with other viands. Some cantaloupes of extra fine quality, and, therefore, extra price, which I had purchased for our breakfast the next morning also adorned the table, while four bottles of beer from the supply Dicky had ordered for the entertainment of Harry Underwood completed the feast.

"Jim, You Tell Dem." Seated in a big rocking chair which I had provided for Katie's kitchen was Jim, a fatuous smile upon his broad face and his arms around Katie, who, perched upon his knee, was rumpling his hair between kisses and giggles.

At our entrance, Katie gave one startled scream, then dashing away from Jack's side, she put her hands up to her face and covered in a corner, for all the world as if she expected an old-fashioned switching. Jim got to his feet awkwardly and stood flushing a brick-red from embarrassment, although I detected a glint of anger in his eyes.

I did not blame him. I felt an intruder, as if I had roughly drawn a veil from something which, no matter how crudely expressed, was yet sacred to these two.

But my mother-in-law saw nothing in the scene save impertinent presumption and indelicacy.

"I should think you would hide your face, you wicked girl," she began. "How dare you have a man in the kitchen at this time of night? What do you suppose Mrs. Graham and I think of you?"

"Oh, Mother Graham, do stop," I said, but she paid no heed to me.
"And stealing food to make a spread like this," my mother-in-law went on, when a hysterical scream from Katie startled us both. The girl took down her hands from her face and advanced toward us with a face of such fury that instinctively I stepped in front of my mother-in-law. I was actually afraid the girl might strike her.

"You had, had old womans to say dot to me," Katie shrieked. "I not had girl. I not steal food. Dot stuff in house I cook, I feex, vy not I eat?"
I saw her naive viewpoint at once, and I felt my heart go out to the girl, who I saw was almost beside herself with shame and anger.

"And vy not I have a man in my kitchen?" Katie went on superbly ignoring my mother-in-law's commanding gesture to stop. "I not old womans, I young girl, vy I eat, all by myself? Besides—"
She broke off abruptly and turned to the tawdry giant standing by the chair they had left.

"Well, you see, ma'am, Katie and I got engaged this evening. We're going to get married pretty soon."

FOUNDERS' DAY SET FOR MAY 3

Boat Schedule Causes Postponement of Historic Celebration

Founders' Day will be celebrated at Champeez May 3, this year instead of May 2 which is the actual anniversary of the historic meeting at which Oregon became United States territory. The change has been made necessary by the boat schedule. It was found impossible to charter a boat from Portland on Friday and as a result the celebration was changed to Saturday.
P. H. D'Arcy of Salem has been chosen as president of the day and will be in charge of all arrangements. The program will consist of speeches having a five minute limit, music, readings and luncheon at noon. The Fernwood band of Yamhill county will supply the instrumental music.

WARREN EAST, HEARING OFF

Airing of Fish and Game Controversy Is Postponed Indefinitely

Because Frank M. Warren, a member of the fish and game commission who is under fire by the Oregon Sportsmen's league, has been called east unexpectedly, a hearing of charges against the commission which Governor Olcott set for next Friday has been postponed indefinitely. The governor will issue another call to members of the commission, the sportsmen's league and any others who claim to have facts bearing on the affair as soon as Mr. Warren returns.

ORIGIN OF MEDICINES
The agents employed for the treatment of disease are taken from the three kingdoms of nature, the vegetable, animal and mineral. Most medicinal substances are taken from the vegetable kingdom and consist of leaves, flowers, seeds, barks and roots. The old-fashioned root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which owes its success to the vegetable kingdom, has constantly grown in popularity and favor until it is now recognized as the standard remedy for female ills.
