KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to fee young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

You will know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets by their olive color. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

formation that he and Katie had been 'getting engaged this evening' and were 'going to get married pretty soon.'

Mother Graham had heard a noise in the kitchen and had summoned me to go with her to investigate it. We had found the table set for a spread with a profusion of our food, and Katie and Jim snugly ensconced in the big rocking chair.

The memory of Mother Graham's insulting words to the girl made my cheeks burn. My mind went swiftly back to the never-to-be-forgotten night when Dicky and I had plighted our troth. I remembered it as if it were but an hour before.

We were sitting in one of the small parlors of Mrs. Stewart's home in Brooklyn, where my mother and I had lived so many years, and where after her death, I had stayed until my marriage to Dicky. Mrs. Stewart, wise, tender mother that she was to the girls that boarded with her, called that parlor her 'courtroom.' No one was ever allowed to disturb the occupants of that room when a young woman was entertaining a young man there.

Mrs. Stewart had been Jack Bicklett's staunchest partisan. She disliked Dicky intensely, yet she never in any manner disturbed us. I thought, with a shuddering horror of what it would have meant to Dicky and me if someone had rudely broken in upon us in the sacred moments after he had asked and I had answered the most momentous question of our lives.

My heart went out to Katie with remorse and sympathy. I went swiftly over to the girl and took her twisting, fluttering, angry hands in my own.

'Will You Forgive Me?'

'Katie, dear,' I said softly, 'will you forgive me? I am so sorry this has happened. If you had told me you expected Jim I would not have disturbed you. I'm very glad for your happiness, Katie. Eat your supper now and tell me all about it tomorrow.'

I turned to the shy six-footer, standing beside her.

'I congratulate you, Jim,' I said, holding out my hand. 'Katie is a dear good girl. Come to see her often.'

My mother-in-law was standing as if petrified when I turned to her from Jim. Her face was dark with disapproval of my handling the situation, but to my great surprise she did not speak. I thought, with a little triumphant thrill, that evidently she remembered and meant to abide by the ultimatum I had given her on the occasion of her outrageous treatment of Lillian Underwood.

I had told her then that I would always make her welcome in our home and treat her with all deference, but that I would never allow her to interfere in any possible concern of mine. Was it possible that she meant to abide by those words quietly?

She preceded me out of the room, paying no attention whatever to the voluble thanks which Katie was pouring out to me.

When I joined her in the hall we walked in silence the length of it, mounted the stairs and went to our rooms. At the door of hers she paused with her hand upon the knob, turned to me, and said with emphasis:

'Of course, Margaret, you thin all these socialistic notions of yours are very fine, but when you're lived as long as I have you'll learn that it doesn't pay to pamper maids. You're probably blaming yourself for hurting Katie's feelings. Katie like that haven't any fine feelings such as you'

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified coconut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called 'Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound.' It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

and I have. But you're young and you'll learn I hope.'

She went to her room quickly and shut the door.

I smiled to myself as I reflected upon the thoroughly characteristic way in which she managed to have the last word in the matter. She probably imagined she had withered me and actions of contempt of my thoughts

There was only one remark of hers which remained in my mind and that was with a far different effect than she had intended. She had spoken of Katie as belonging to 'cattle that had no finer feelings.' I reflected a little bitterly that it would not have been possible for Katie or anyone of her kind to have displayed a greater lack of fine feeling than had my mother-in-law.

Katie's engagement, however, upset me. It was almost time for us to return to the city for the winter. Of course, if Katie were to be married she would not go back with us. The girl had been with me since the first month of my marriage. I did not realize how much I had grown to depend upon her efficient service.

My second season of lectures before the history class of the Lotus Study club would soon begin. They were paying me $25 a lecture this season, and the topics were to be the current political and war news of the day, with the tracing back of their causes in events that had gone before.

When Lillian had seen the outlined course she had said emphatically that it was a big man-sized job I had undertaken, and I felt that she was right. It entailed a great deal more work and study for me than had the course of the last season.

It would be simply impossible for me to attempt both the work and my housework without the assistance of a well-trained maid, and with my mother-in-law as a member of our family I distinctly dreaded breaking in a new girl.

I lay awake so long pondering the matter that I had not yet fallen asleep when Dicky came in from the last train. I called to him softly as he passed my door, to let him know that I was awake, and he came in and sat down on the side of my bed while I told him of Katie's prospective marriage and the dilemma in which it placed me.

'And you're worrying about that,' said Dicky with fine scorn. 'Plenty of maids to be had in New York city, my dear. If you can't find a satisfactory one we can always go to a hotel.'

He gave me a kiss that was meant to be consoling, and went on to his own room, while I wished, oh, so earnestly, that I could throw all care and responsibility from my shoulders as lightly as could Dicky.

EDITORIALS OF THE PEOPLE

The Statesman is pleased to print communications upon topics of general interest at any time. There is scarcely any limit to the topics of 'general interest.' It is asked only that correspondents refrain from personalities and use care that nothing be written of a libelous nature. Letters must have writer's name and address, though not necessarily for publication.—Ed.)

Judge Benson Answers To the Editor: My good friends Mr. Huston and Mr. Kunej, both honored veterans of our Civil war, think that my harsh words regarding the mutinous company of soldiers at Archangel, were undeserved. I am not willing to concede that even that if the situation were no worse than pictured in their communication of yesterday morning, that it would be possible to justify the conduct of those men. However, my remarks on Sunday evening were based upon a statement credited to General March in one of the evening papers of Portland, of last Saturday. I have not the printed statement before me at this moment, but the substance of it was, that the men who disregarded their oath, and refused to obey their officers, based their action upon, and asked questions taken, from Bolshevik circulars, which the enemy succeeded in getting across the line. I agree with General March.

that it is fortunate that such disgrace of the uniform of our army is exceedingly rare.

I am glad that there were no Oregon men in that company and I venture a guess that a majority of them were not born in this country. I am not given to criticism of the American soldier for I regard them as being the finest body of fighting men the world has ever known. My own son has just returned from long service in France, but I should not forgive him if he mutilated at the behest of a Bolshevik enemy.

—Henry L. Benson.

ROLL OF HONOR

In response to The Statesman's published appeal to parents of soldiers and sailors who lost their lives in the service to notify the paper of such casualties the honor roll is gradually growing. Sanger Fox Meetings at Marion Drawing Crowds

MARION, Or., April 16.—The special meetings now in progress in the Friends church here with J. Sanger Fox of Portland as evangelist are being well attended, almost the whole community being present at the Sunday evening services. The attendance at week night services and during the 2 o'clock afternoon sessions are good. The singing of Miss Gertrude Cook, also of Portland, but a former Marion girl, is proving a great drawing card. She has an unusually sweet voice and much power of expression.

Arrangements have been made for a special service for the young people Thursday night at the usual hour of 8 p. m. Rev. Chester A. Hadley, yearly meeting superintendent of Christian Endeavor will preside, and both Mr. Fox and Miss Cook will have part in the services. Arrangements have been made for
