LOCAL LABOR PREFERRED

Well Drillers Boring to Provide Institution With Separate System

Construction on the Valley Packing company's plant in North Salem will begin next Monday, according to a statement made last night by Curtis B. Cross, one of the members of the corporation. The packing house is to be completed and ready for operation by October 1.

Bids on the buildings were opened Monday at 1 p. m. and F. J. Leonard, a Portland packing house specialist and engineer, was awarded the contract. The building will be of concrete construction and reinforced steel. The latter is to be installed by the Truscon Steel company of Portland. The structure will be of three stories besides the basement, making a total floor space of 24,128 square feet, including one additional building, which will be used for the fertilizer department, rendering tanks and boiler room. The size of the main plant will be 82 1/2 feet square and the adjoining building, 24 by 36 feet.

An independent water system will be installed to supply the entire building and stock yards. The well drillers are now at work and expect to have their project completed in about three weeks.

A separate contract has been awarded for the freezing and refrigerating system and an order has been placed with a New York firm for 69,700 feet of pure cork board for insulation purposes. This will constitute three carloads of material. Electric power will be used throughout the plant.

The entire cost of the complete plant with the buildings, machinery, stock yards and equipment consisting of an electric elevator, automatic scales, and refining apparatus and hydraulic presses is to total over $130,000.

Mr. Leonard is now in the city assembling his graders to begin work next week. He will employ practically all Salem labor.
