Chin Fong has been captured in San Francisco, and Mr. Tichenor will bring him home. Years ago, Inspector Tichenor was Carroll Tichenor, a boy in Salem, son of Jacob Tichenor, and grandson of Captain Tichenor, a southern Oregon pioneer. Inspector Tichenor went out to the old Tichenor home, in North Salem, yesterday afternoon, and he also visited the penitentiary, where a number of his "boys," whom he has arrested in his time, are doing hitches for various offenses, from larceny to murder. The former Salem boy has been on the Portland police and detective force for many years, and he has made a good record. As a diversion, or hobby, Inspector Tichenor has become a very successful poultryman. He raises chickens and ducks of the purest strains, and he makes it pay, too.

Prisoner at Penitentiary Goes Before Court Today

George Harrison, a convict at the state penitentiary, for whom habeas corpus proceedings have been instituted to obtain his release, will appear in Judge Morrow's court and Warden Stevens has been requested to assist Harrison in getting to Portland for an appearance. Harrison is doing time for holding up persons at Lents as they alighted from a street car. It is said he was badly intoxicated at the time and that his capture was effected when one of the persons held up struck him on the head with a hammer. According to Warden Stevens Harrison pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the penitentiary, but through an error made in the county clerk's office the record shows that the indictment against him was dismissed.

Request for New Bank Is Denied by Officials

The banking board yesterday upheld Will H. Bennett, state superintendent of banks, in his rejection of proposal of L. A. Bass and associates to establish a new bank at St. Johns, Portland. Mr. Bass exercised right to appeal from the decision of the superintendent to the banking board and a hearing was given him last Monday. The reason for the disapproval is that St. Johns is already sufficiently supplied with banks. It was stated by Superintendent Bennett that the First Trust & Savings bank of St. Johns had filed supplementary articles of incorporation changing its name to the Bank of Commerce. The bank is erecting new building and will move from its present location in the outskirts of the city into the business district.
