CONVENTION ODDITIES

When four little girls pinned the jewel of the degree of chivalry on 53 kneeling women in the armory Tuesday night Little Maud Engstrom had the honor of presenting one to her own mother, Mrs. Louella I. Engstrom of this city.

Rev. C. P. Stayton, who opened Tuesday night's banquet with a prayer, is an old Odd Fellow. He is a former Methodist minister from Portland.

The two men who received the decoration of chivalry were Grand Secretary Clyde E. Lewis and Maurice E. Briggs, both of Portland. The degree is given by the Rebekah lodge to its members, but can also be granted men who are Patriarchs Militant.

Dr. O. D. Doane of The Dalles is here attending the grand lodge. He is a past grand master and for many years was grand treasurer.

John E. Matthews, one of the owners of the Yaquina Bay News of Newport, was at the grand encampment representing Yaquina encampment No. 65.

P. A. Hantz, grand patriarch-elect, has gained the highest honors in the Patriarchs Militant branch of the order. He has been an Odd fellow for over 30 years and for many years was treasurer of his lodge. He is also exalted ruler of the Baker lodge of Elks.

E. E. Wimberly is a Roseburg newspaper man of many years experience, who is here for a few days. He is a past grand patriarch and past grand representative.

Fraak G. Micelli of Roseburg, a past grand representative of the grand encampment and a prominent lawyer, who is now legal adviser to the men working in one of the big Portland shipyards, was absent for the first time this year. He has not missed grand encampment for many years and may come later in the week.

One of the Coos county men here is John Hall, past grand master and past grand representative. He is from Marshfield, where he served several years as district attorney.

Among the visitors here from a long distance to attend the convention are several from Washington. M. Ellen Pike of Phoenix, Ariz., and F. E. Fuller of Flat Rock, Mich., have probably traveled the furthest. Those from neighboring states are Ella T. Morrison, Clarkston, Wn.; Mrs. J. L. Mordock, Kelso, Wn.; Florence Humphreys, Snohomish, Wn., and Rachel Manesse, San Francisco.

Two of the jolly Odd Fellows in the Grand Lodge are Hugh Bell, representing the Healy lodge, and a prominent stockman of that section, and R. Alexander, of Pendleton. Everybody knows Mr. Alexander. Everybody in Oregon. He has been an Odd Fellow for 95 years. (It is longer the writer would say so.) And he is still going strong. Mr. Alexander does not have much to say about himself; but he does have a good deal to say about his son, Roy, who was a sergeant in Uncle Sam's service, and who is now back home, at Pendleton. He offered himself for the supreme sacrifice for his country and the world, and he made good.

Adolph Greenbaum First Salem Man in New Service

Adolph Greenbaum, son of Isadore Greenbaum, is the first Salem man to enlist in the Marine corps limited overseas service open to former soldiers and marines. He will go to Portland, and from there to Quantico, Va., and then will be sent to France. Under the terms of the enlistment he will be discharged upon his return to the United States next fall.
 Sergeant Lawrence D. Howell who is in charge of the local marine corps recruiting office declares that the enlistments for this limited overseas service are very heavy in Portland and that he anticipates the number of men required will be raised at a very early date.
