Government Will Sell Silk—
The surplus property division of the war department is advertising for sale several million yards of pure silk cloth in several weights and weaves, manufactured by the leading silk mills of the country. When it appeared that the war might go on for several years the silk was ordered to hold the charges for the big guns, and now that there is no use for it the government will sell the silk. The bulletin on the subject says it is suitable for men's and women's clothing, for curtains, draperies and hangings. Canned vegetables in cases of 24 cans to the case are also advertised for sale.

Campers Supplies—

One Accident Fatal—
Out of a total of 470 accidents reported to the state accident commission for the week ending June 26 only one was fatal. This was the case of Ole L. Jensen of Portland, who was accidentally killed in a shipyard. Of the total number of casualties reported 442 were subject to the provisions of the workmen's compensation act. 13 were from the firms and corporations that have rejected the provisions of the act and 15 were from public utility corporations that are not subject to the law.

Holman Awarded $200—
The case of John B. Holman against his daughter, Mrs. Carolyn Meyer of San Francisco, was tried in department No. 1 of the circuit court yesterday. Mr. Holman brought suit to recover $460 which he loaned to his daughter several years ago when she was living in Salem. In order to secure the money he placed a mortgage upon the lot just south of the Salem high school which was sold to the school district in 1916. The jury awarded him $260.

AT THE LIBRARY

"Imperial England," an interpretation of the British empire, which is termed by the authors "the greatest and, on the whole the most satisfactory political organization the world has yet known." Written by two professors in Grinnell college, Lovell and Payne.

"The Day of Glory," a continuation of the story of "Home Fires in France" up to the day when France celebrated the signing of the armistice, by Dorothy Canfield Fisher.

"Making of the Movies," a description of the difficulties in training the movie actors and taking the pictures for the scenarios, told by Ernest Dench.

"Peach Growing," the whole science of setting out a peach orchard, caring for it, and marketing the fruit, is given in detail by H. P. Gould, a pomologist in the service of the department of agriculture.

"Garden Steps," a full story of the production of each of the common vegetables told for the amateur gardener, by Ernest Cobb.

"The Burgomaster of St. Louis," a new drama of the war by Maurice Maeterlinck.

"The man Nobody Knew," an after the war novel, by H. E. Porter who writes under the name of Holworthy Hall.

"The Secret City," a gripping story of Russia during the revolution; it continues some of the characters of "The Dark Forest," both by Hugh Walpole.

"Running Eagle," the story of a maiden warrior of the Blackfoot tribe, told by J. W. Schultz, who was adopted by the Blackfoot Indians.

Books for the Young Patriot
With the approach of our patriotic season, the patriotic story is the best kind to read. The library has many of which the following are suggestive:

"Children's Book of Patriotic Stories," by Ada Dickinson.

"Let Us Forget," a collection of world war stories, by J. G. Thompson.

"The Flag," the story of a boy who once spurned the flag, by Homer Green.

"Lafayette," by C. D. Crow.

"Old Glory," how one man thought he could give up his allegiance to it.

"Naval Heroes of Today," by Francis Collins.

HE THREW AWAY HIS CRUTCHES

"Six years ago I had rheumatism so bad I was going on crutches," writes August Ctrandell, Sister Bay, Wis. "I tried several medicines and doctors and got no relief. Three bottles of Foley Kidney Pills cured me. I threw away my crutches." Have no equal for weak, sore, aching back, muscles or joints. J. C.

DISTINCTIVE DRESS.

Henry Turner Bailey, in one of his Chautauqua lectures, called attention to the fact that God did not give the elephant and the butterfly the same color. This fact suggests that in choosing our clothes, color is one of the first points to be considered. If you will observe the best dressed persons, you will find that those who are large wear quiet colors, because these call less attention to their size. A safe rule to follow is to make the predominating color of your dress match your hair or eyes. Then use some harmonizing or contrasting color for trimming.

Suppose now we have decided on the colors we should wear. How shall we have our clothes made? It has been said that the best dressed persons attract the least attention. Few of us could wear the extreme styles without attracting much attention. So, for most of us, an adaptation of the season's styles which does not proclaim our size or personal defects will be most becoming. Long lines for short people and short lines for tall people is the general rule.

What material shall we choose? Would it not be better to have a few dresses of serviceable material, made so well that we always feel dressed appropriate for the occasion, than several dresses of material so poor that they look shabby after being worn a few times? If we are not good judges of materials most of us have friends who would be glad to help us select what will wear well and be likely to keep its color.

Why is it that some women wear furs and velvet hats in summer and in winter the thinnest of waists and straw hats? Does this kind of dressing express qualities of character which a woman should possess? Surely, plain common sense is needed in the matter of dress if we are to keep the respect of our associates and the community in which we live. Why not stick to the old-fashioned idea of dark material of good texture for winter, with light material of not too sheer weave for summer? "Be not the first by whom the new is tried."

Nor yet the last to lay the old aside. Then, too, if we wish to express good sense we shall dress for our work or for the occasion. Personal neatness and appropriate dress surely exert a wonderful influence. If you have not studied yourself in this matter it is worth trying.

Alice Freeman Palmer said that it is not wise to wear clothes that put a distance between us and those with whom we associate. So the place where we are living will have much to do with the number and kind of dresses needed.
