

NATION LEAGUE IS CONDEMNED

Friends of Irish Freedom Adopt Resolutions at Meeting Last Night

Condemnation of the League of Nations as "an effort to perpetuate the autocratic power of England and Japan over the destinies of the world" is contained in resolutions adopted recently at a meeting of Robert Emmett branch of the Friends of Irish Freedom. It is asserted in the resolutions that the liberty and progress of the world depends on the defeat of the League of Nations as submitted to the United States senate. The resolution denounces "in unmeasured terms the action of the Japanese government in taking from China the large extent of territory known as the Shantung peninsula."

The resolutions follow: "Whereas, Eamonn De Valera, president of the Irish republic has recently made a triumphal tour of a large part of this country having been received in kindly spirit by a vast majority of our citizens and "Whereas, this distinguished patriot, scholar and statesman, has been unjustly imprisoned in England for advocating the principles of self-determination for Erin; and "Whereas, Self-Determination is in accord with the principles advanced by President Wilson, and "Whereas, the infamous government of Ireland by England for 750 years has been such as to merit the condemnation of all liberty loving peoples; and "Whereas, the Salem Daily Statesman, while differing from us on the question of the ratification of the League of Nations, has at all times treated Americans of Irish birth and descent in a fair manner; and "Whereas, the liberty and progress of the world depends on the defeat of the League of Nations as submitted to the United States senate; and "Whereas, The League of Nations approves the Shantung steal where the Japanese government has robbed the Chinese of the choicest and fairest portion of that country and her 30,000,000 of people;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That as American citizens we condemn the action of the English government in imprisoning a gentleman of the character and attainments of Eamonn De Valera for no other reason than believing in the liberty of his country and the welfare of her people.

"Resolved, That we approve and commend the people of this country who have extended to Eamonn De Valera, such a generous and sincere welcome to the United States.

"Resolved, That we rejoice with the president of the Irish Republic that he was able to escape from an English prison and place before American citizens the true position of the people of Erin in their efforts of self-determination and the recognition of the Irish republic by the governments of the world.

"Resolved, That we tender to the Salem Daily Statesman our sincere thanks for its courtesy, and fair treatment of the matters involved in the Irish controversy.

"Resolved, That we are unalterably in favor of self-determination for all the small nationalities of the earth.

"Resolved, That we condemn the so-called League of Nations as an effort to perpetuate the autocratic power of England and Japan over the destinies of the world.

"Resolved, That we denounce in unmeasured terms the action of the Japanese government in taking from China the large extent of territory known as the Shantung peninsula without consent of the Chinese people;

"Resolved, That we invite all our citizens regardless of politics, religion or nationality, who are in favor of liberty in its purest and best sense, believe in freedom of all small nations and desire to extend to all peoples the great blessings of liberty as contained in our immortal Declaration of Independence, to join the Robert Emmett branch of the Friends of Irish Freedom of Salem, Oregon."

PORTER AGAINST EXTRA SESSION

Linn County Senator Opposed and Shanks Would Have Members Paid

Senator F. H. Porter of Linn county lines up with those members of the legislature who do not want a special session called to ratify the national woman suffrage amendment. Senator Porter is a believer in the ratification of the amendment to assure the amendment he would be in favor. Otherwise he does not see the necessity of calling a session at the busy time of the year and does not think members should be asked to pay their own expenses. This would be just he thinks, only if a session were called to correct some error made by the regular session.

Senator M. D. Shanks of Gilliam, Sherman and Wheeler counties believes the ratification question is important enough to warrant a special session, but he is opposed to the members paying their own expenses.

"I am not informed as to your views on this matter," writes Senator Shanks, "but it seems to me that to ask the members to go to Salem for a special session and to act without pay is but to belittle the importance of this great question."

He seems to me that our experience with woman suffrage has been such as to justify us in saying to the women of America that Oregon is willing to go to a little expense that they might have the privilege of the ballot at the earliest possible moment. However, if the condition of the treasury is such that it will not stand the expense of a special session I will gladly sacrifice my time and money to be present."

He urges that the session be deferred until after the harvest season. Governor Olcott yesterday received a letter from the Women's Marion County Republican Study club urging that he call a special session. The communication is signed by Mrs. Fannie Kay Bishop and Mrs. R. E. Moores.

ADMIRAL IN COMMAND IS HERO OF LATE WAR

nals, these codes; all information obtained to policy and confided to us their most secret codes which was very much like the ewe of old when they entered the holy of holies. They also gave me secret information on their espionage system which I have never even given to our own government. This system enabled us to know whenever the German ships stuck their heads out from their holes. The Germans could not have steamed coffee in a pot for an hour but what we would have known it."

Two Nations Exchange Views
The admiral said that much other information was exchanged between the American and British fleets in regard to fire control, interior discipline and matters of all kinds relating to the work at hand. Instruments were also exchanged.

"The British marvelled at our quick use of the English codes and signals," continued the Pacific fleet's admiral, "but in spite of all the cooperation that part which surprised them most was that we never lost our Americanism in the slightest degree." The flagship New York which Admiral Rodman commanded, was unsuccessfully attacked by a submarine in the North Sea. "The Germans pursued us," said the admiral, "and then got afloat of our starboard propeller and I think that one was sunk. It was off Norway and we ran into a flock of submarines. We scattered our ships and torpedoes were discharged at us. The torpedoes were fired at the Florida which had made a quick turn so that one torpedo passed 30 yards astern and the other 30 feet across her bow."

"The North Sea was a mass of mines and it required the closest attention in the handling of our ships. I never had my clothes off the whole time at sea and neither myself nor the officers and crew slept ashore during our entire stay abroad. We had to be in constant readiness and there was never more than four hours shore leave given."

Admiral Rodman is said to be the first American officer to receive the decoration of Knighthood of Bath conferred upon him by King George for his services in the North Sea. It is not recorded that anyone has plucked up enough to address Admiral Rodman, who is extremely democratic, as Admiral Sir Hugh Rodman though King George once asked him at dinner:

"And how is Lady Rodman?" "I have not heard from my wife recently," replied Admiral Rodman and King George laughed. Admiral Rodman said that King George was extremely democratic and that the king never visited the grand fleet without spending an hour with him.

Admiral Rodman has spent most of his life on board ship and like an old sea dog has a fine contempt for what he terms "too much paper work." He was referring to office correspondence in the navy bureaus.

Was Poor Student
"I have the finest filing system in the world," said the admiral, "it is a highly developed type of a waste basket. A lot of stuff that would go the rounds gets inside that waste basket. There is nothing of the brow about me. I believe in hard work and personality. It took me five years to get through Annapolis and I stood 61 out of a class of 62 and if I had to go back I know I would not get through at all."

Admiral Rodman is a lover of fishing and hunting and a fine judge of dogs.

Twining Is Busy Man
"Ask senior naval officer at San Diego to let commander in chief know whether there is any obstacle to execution of our plans for anchorage," said Captain N. C. Twining, chief of staff of the Pacific fleet to his radio officer aboard the flagship New Mexico today. Captain Twining is the man who works out the system and details in putting into execution Admiral Rodman's plans and it was in the same capacity as chief of staff to Admiral Sims in London that Captain Twining planned the work of our navy in European waters. Captain Twining was in no less than 17 air raids in London and one occasion an anti-aircraft shell exploded in his room wrecking the furniture and destroying his clothes. The chief of staff was unharmed.

Battles Related
"On my journey to London in August, 1917," said Captain Twining, who becomes a rear admiral in October in recognition of his work in England, "the steamship St. Louis on which I was traveling, was attacked by a submarine. Shots were exchanged and some of the German's shells fell uncomfortably close to the St. Louis. Fortunately we escaped. I believe the St. Louis was the only American line steamship to be attacked in the war."

"Admiral Sims and myself had two rooms assigned us at the American embassy, when we first went over, and we had three aides and three clerks. As our naval participation in the war increased we expanded our forces so that when the armistice came our force had grown to four hundred and occupied ten buildings of 100 rooms."

"Admiral Sims had general direction of all naval matters and that included our overseas fleet, mine-sweeping and convoy work. We, of course, availed ourselves of all aid that the British admiralty could give us, particularly the intelligence department. We made no attempt to develop an intelligence department of our own. We established our own telephone and telegraph lines from London to Paris and Brest and to the cable offices. These lines were manned exclusively by our own men."

Convoy Leaks Meant Trouble
"Our greatest effort was to avoid leaks in convoy work. The names of transports at sea with troops aboard or those transports about to sail were known to only a few and the navy department was not advised of the movement of troop transports. The only information disclosed by us was given one or two days before a transport was due to arrive in a brief message to General Pershing's headquarters that a certain unit would arrive in Brest within a day."

"One phase of our work in London was the handling of the mail for sailors for our fleet abroad. The name of every sailor was put on a card index so that his mail could be forwarded for it must be remembered when anyone wrote to one of our sailors abroad during the war, it was always addressed 'care of Admiral Sims.' At one time we were handling 4000 pieces of mail daily."

Captain Well Known
Captain Twining is no stranger to the Pacific coast, having sailed the Albatross in these waters in 1894 while in 1899 and 1900 he was assigned to the Iowa and Philadelphia, then a part of the Pacific squadron. Captain Twining's last visit here was in 1908 when he was executive officer on the battleship Kearsarge in the around the world tour.

INDIAN MEDICINE MEN
In the Indian Tribe one finds the "Medicine Man,"—one versed in the healing art of roots, herbs, leaves and barks. In these he discovers emollients, astringents, laxatives and tonics, all of which are prepared and offered to sufferers among the tribe. To such good, old-fashioned roots and herbs Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the most efficient remedy in the world for female ills, owes its success. For forty-five years it has been restoring the women of America to health, until it is now recognized as the standard remedy.

BIG MEAT PACKING FIRMS ARE SUE

dent probably would deal with these subjects:

Plans Outlined.
Enlargement of the provisions of the Lever food control law to make it operative after the proclamation of peace and applicable to shoes, clothing and all life necessities in addition to food.

Legislation to reach the small individual profiteer as well as "big business" extortion.

Legislation to define profiteering, thereby making easier prosecution under existing laws.

Laws to make speculation in necessities a crime.

Legislation limiting the margin of profit on necessities.

Another major development of the day was the making public of the federal trade commission's report on the shoe industry investigation. This report charged that the high price of shoes resulted from excessive profit taken by every factor in the trade.

The packers, tanners, manufacturers and retailers all shared in the blame. The report was placed before Attorney General Palmer today.

Hoarder Out of Luck.
The hoarder "is the big part of the game right now," in the opinion of the government officials in charge of the efforts to bring down prices, and Attorney General Palmer indicated today that he was depending largely on the section of the Lever act dealing with hoarding as one of the most immediate means of forcing prices down.

"The price gouger can be reached in another way," the attorney general said, explaining that there was not much difference between hoarding and profiteering.

The attorney general today pointed out that all of the war-time laws governing production and distribution of foodstuffs were in force and that they would be used to the fullest extent. The conditions confronting the country now, he said, are properly classed as resulting from the war and are a part of war conditions.

Packers Defended.
Testifying before a senate committee investigating living conditions in the District of Columbia, Thomas Wilson, president of Wilson and company and chairman of the Institute of American Meat Packers, declared that the packers were not profiteering. The high cost of living, he told the committee, was a world problem and not local.

"The world is on a holiday and people are spending money like drunken sailors without producing," he added.

SCHOOLS SEEK SOLDIER YOUTH

Six Oregon Institutions Submit Evidence to Secretary of State

Six schools and colleges of the state, aside from the state schools have been submitted to the secretary of state statements and catalogues as evidence that they are institutions of learning within the meaning of soldiers', sailors' and marines educational aid law. They signify their desire to receive from discharged service men applications to pursue courses of study. The schools that have submitted their evidence are: Behnke-Walker Business college, Portland; Pacific university, Forest Grove; Eugene Business college, Eugene; Philomath college, Philomath; Capital Business college, Salem; Willamette university, Salem.

"These are the institutions which have thus far filed evidence of their status as educational institutions, in addition to the public institutions of the state, which, of course, are recognized without further statements," said Deputy Secretary of State Sam A. Koser. "Those institutions which have not signified their intention of accepting applications under the law and desire to do so, as well as establish their status as educational institutions are requested to apply to the secretary of state for the necessary clamps and instructions in order that they may establish their status as educational institutions in Oregon and be in a position to accept applications of honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines who may desire to pursue courses of study therein."

MOST WIDOWS STAY SINGLE

Small Percentage Remarry of Those Whose Husbands Die by Accident

Oregon women who are left widows by the deaths of husbands in industrial accidents are not strongly prone to remarry, as shown by statistics of the state industrial accident department. Of a total of 562 women who have become widows since July 1, 1914, when the compensation act became operative, only 34, or 6.04 per cent have remarried. When a widow remarries her compensation under the act ceases, but she is allowed a lump sum of $3000 at her marriage, while the compensation allowed children by her deceased husband continues.

Of the 34 widows who have remarried the figures show that 10 remarried before one year had elapsed after the husband's death, 14 under two years following the accident, seven under three years and three under four years.

Taken year by year the following figures are shown:
July 1, 1914, to July 30, 1915—Widows left by fatal accidents, 71; married under one year, 2; under two years none; under three years 3; under four years, 2; total remarriages, 7; per cent 9.86.

July 1, 1915 to June 30, 1916—Widows, 72; remarried under one year, none; under two years 4; under three years, 2; under four years, 1; total remarriages, 7, per cent 9.72.

July 1, 1916 to June 30, 1917—Widows, 90; remarried under one year, 5; under two years, 5; under three years 2; under four years none; total remarriages, 12; per cent, 13.33.

July 1, 1917 to June 30, 1918—Widows, 172; remarried under one year 3; under two years, 5; under three years, none; under four years, none; total remarriages, 8; per cent 4.65.

Of the 34 widows 11 were without children when remarried, eight had one child each, seven had two children, four had three children, three had four children, and one had seven children.

The average refund in each case was $6,033.43.

Growth is Shown by the Oregon Dairymen's League

The Oregon Dairymen's league, having headquarters in Portland, filed resolutions yesterday at the office of State Corporation Commissioner Schulerman showing an increase in its capital stock from $12,000 to $25,000. Articles of incorporation were filed by the Astoria Stationery company, capitalized at $5000. The incorporators are Charles F. Bolinger, N. Ray, Albert and William B. Layton.

Big Business is Done by Corporation Office

Some conception of the increase in business going through the state corporation department can be gained by a comparison of the amount of money collected in fees that was turned over for July, 1918, and the amount that has been turned over for July of this year. Corporation Commissioner H. J. Schulerman has just turned over to State Treasurer O. P. Hoff, representing fees collected from corporations during July the sum of $55,587.55, which exceeds by $20,000 the amount turned in for July last year.

STATE FRUITMEN LOOK TO SALEM

Paulus Hears Favorable Comment on City's Future Throughout Oregon

"All fruit roads lead to Salem and all fruitmen's eyes are on Salem," declared Robert C. Paulus yesterday in discussing the general outlook of the fruit industry. "Wherever I have gone I have heard numerous remarks about the bright prospects for this city as one of the great fruit centers of the coast. At Roseburg, and from there north and throughout western Oregon I find the attitude that Salem is a comer and that it is destined to come into its own in a very short time."

Evangelistic Meeting Gain in Interest and Attendance

Interest and attendance continues to increase at the evangelistic meetings being held at Fourteenth and A streets under the auspices of the Marion County Holiness association. It is generally held that the sermons are among the most effective and stirring heard in evangelistic services in Salem in a long time.

Sunday night the sermon was by Evangelist Roberts whose theme was "What Does a Man Give in Exchange for His Soul" and Tuesday night he spoke on the story of Esau. Monday night Evangelist Suffield spoke on "Buy Wisdom and Sell It Not" and last night on the writings of Paul.

The meetings are interdenominational.
