REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

The Story of a Honeymoon

A Wonderful Romance of Married Life Wonderfully Told by ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER CCLXV
In the least, indeed, I think guests, no matter who they are, will make it easier for me."

Pausing only to give Dicky her message, I hung up the receiver and hurried to the staircase to the psychic old figure still standing upon the landing.

"Mother Graham," I said earnestly, and something about her emboldened me to slip a caressing arm about her. "I cannot tell you how sorry I am for this disappointment. I wish I could make it easier for you."

With a swift, impulsive movement, totally unlike her, she turned and put her face against my shoulder. I held her closely, happy in the thought that she had come to me for sympathy. I felt that though my mother-in-law and I would in all probability have many clashes in the future, there could never again be the bitterness that there sometimes had been in the past.
