SNAP IN EDITORIALS

(Oregon Voter)

Salem Statesman has an editorial writer who puts a lot of pep and good sense into the opinion column of that daily.

"The stars in their courses fight for Salem from now on," he writes in commenting upon the way Salem has been taken hold of by loganberry juice manufacturers, dehydrated fruit manufacturers and paper manufacturers.

"Let's get behind every industry that has merit," he urges, "and put it over so big the world can never say again that Salem isn't on the job."

If these editorials voice the new Salem spirit, nothing can keep the old town down.

Thanks for the compliment.

And still greater thanks for the last paragraph. These editorials do voice the new Salem spirit, and nothing can keep the old town down.

More and more wealth will be taken out of the soil, year after year, as these great industries grow.

There will be no end to it.

With such conditions, Salem's growth is as certain as anything in the future can possibly be.

Salem's growth and continued prosperity.

It is a prosperity, too, that is reciprocal; that binds the country to the city and joins them both together in a steady upward course towards the best ideals of urban, suburban and rural life and living. Salem will be a prosperous city.

And at the same time she will be a model city surrounded by a model country, in all things that represent the best in American ideals.

SALEM ON WORLD MAP

(Oregon Voter)

Through advertising columns of Saturday Evening Post and other great magazines of international circulation the English-speaking world is being made familiar with the names of products of Willamette Valley fruits manufactured in Salem. The Phez people and the King's Products people are spending nearly $250,000 for this advertising.

Salem Statesman recognizes in this an effort which will redound greatly to the advantage of Salem and Oregon. Not only is it making "Salem one of the best-advertised communities in the United States," but "the name Oregon will soon become as magic as the name of California."

"Through the ability and courage of Oregon business men, we are to take our place in the sun. People from all over the country are being attracted here and farm lands are being bought. With what Salem and the Valley have to offer in choice, fertile lands at reasonable prices and a guaranteed market through these industries, it is certain we are due for a great growth."

Appeals are made for the community to back up these great industries in every possible way. The Voter believes these appeals will be heeded. No effort ever made in the history of Oregon ever has done so much to advertise this state, extend the market for its products or minister more directly to the prosperity of its farmers than what is being accomplished by the Phez and King people at their own expense.

By his efforts to reconcile the contending political factions in the upper house of Congress, and secure the ratification of the treaty, with reservations that would satisfy the over cautious and thus perform a useful service, and do no possible harm, Senator McNary of Oregon has taken a place in the lime light, on the world stage. The men of his mind and purpose are constantly referred to in the dispatches as the "McNary group." That group of men will lead the entire world to the path of peace, if it is to be so led at all in the very near future. This consummation would signally honor the "McNary group," and earn its members a place of gratitude in the hearts of all peoples, and deservedly so.

It now seems to be settled that the ex-kaiser will be tried next April at Hampton Court, near London. But if he is to have a jury of his peers, they will have to adjourn to a warmer climate than Hampton Court affords.

Hoover's chief statistician says there's plenty of food in the world. It's merely a question of proper distribution. It took bridges of ships to win the war. It will take bridges of ships to get the world back to a normal peace basis.

Now, if some one will furnish Charley McNary a good steam roller, the job will soon be over.

Watch Salem grow—if only she can provide houses for people to live in.

There are some folks who think they personally discovered the Ten Commandments.

While Lord Northcliffe has given his editors a five-day week, presumably they are not forbidden to think about their work on their days off.

Not an apple should go to waste. The Phez people are getting ready to squeeze out the juice from thousands of tons of them, to make Appju—the cider with a college education.

No, Geraldine, after the federal law for equal suffrage is ratified, FUTURE DATES.

August 14, 15, and 16—Elks state convention at Klamath Falls.
September 22-27—Fifty-eighth Oregon state fair.

IT'S AN ACT OF FOLLY

PRACTICAL MISSIONARIES.

The Methodists have bought a 4000 acre ranch in Southern Chile and purpose to instruct the peons of the country in modern agricultural methods. They wish to train the natives to reach out for their opportunities and provide intelligently for their bodies.

Their souls will come later. This is a reversal of the usual foreign missionary idea, but has the merit of being practical. It isn't necessary to say that they are going far away to inaugurate this line of Christian industrial effort. There are already institutions and agencies carrying out this same work in America and, therefore, no fault can be found with a little pioneering in Chile.

The climate is one which permits of wonderful results in agriculture and fruit raising. The tract is already extensively planted to apples, peaches, pears and apricots and there are also lemon and orange trees in numbers—for the district is one which permits of citrus cultivation.

There are also many fine cattle and sheep. Yet the people round about are much the same as when the Spaniards found them 400 years ago. They are splendid material for a mental and moral awakening and the Methodists are to be honored for their sincere and sensible plans for developing the field.

THEY SHOULD BE MIXED.

Protestant churches of Los Angeles are planning to go into the moving picture business on a gigantic scale.

This is interesting news and it is to be hoped that the producers will not only make pictures that will entertain, instruct and uplift, but that the churches will realize a fair financial return on their investment.

One great trouble with this old world is that as a rule there is too

WHAT NATUROPATHY TEACHES

Naturopathy teaches that since the forces of Nature are able to make the body in the first place and to maintain it in running order—in a state of health—that, therefore, these same forces of Nature are able to restore the body to health when it is sick if the causes of the sickness are removed. In other words, health is the result of the unobstructed working of the natural forces of the body, while disease is the result of interference with the working of the natural forces of the body. Naturopathy teaches that the human body, like that of every other animal, is self healing, if disease-producing interferences are removed so that the body's natural forces may function normally.

Naturopathy teaches that the conditions necessary in order that the natural forces of the body may function normally are, a pure and unobstructed blood stream and a sound nervous system, also unobstructed; and that the factors that produce the one will produce the other. These factors are as follows:

- 1st. An abundance of pure fresh air.
- 2nd. A liberal supply of pure water.
- 3rd. About 8 hours of sleep regularly taken each day.
- 4th. Enough, but not too much, good, plain, wholesome food, properly selected, prepared, combined.
- 5th. Active physical exercise, preferably in the open air.
- 6th. Cleanliness, both mental and physical.

However, a sound mechanical condition of the body is necessary in order that a pure blood stream and a sound nervous system may function normally. In other words, there must be no bony or other pressure on, or other mechanical interference with the blood vessels or nerves. Nerve impulse and circulation must have unobstructed access to every part of the body. IF THESE CONDITIONS EXIST, HEALTH IS INEVITABLE. To assist in establishing these conditions, necessary to health, is our business.

It seems odd for the church folk to urge flying high, but they are doing so far as the Sunday aviators are concerned. Pretty soon they will be painting warnings on the roofs of churches and schools so that the birdmen can jump a mile or so higher and avoid disturbing the exercises.

THE GIFT.

Oh! It was beautiful,
It was poignantly beautiful,
To see the young mother,
With hands outstretched to the future
In simple, sublime act of giving.
Offer herself back to Nature,
With her life as pledge for a new life.

And it was beautiful,
It was heart-breaking, but beautiful,
To see them marching in thousands,
Eager-eyed, resolute, marching;
With quiet eyes set full of visions,
They went up for their chrism of torment;
Since countless future lives called them,
They offered themselves back to Nature,
Their glad, young lives pledged for a new life.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Grain harvest going fine.
But blackberry, hop, prune and other fruit harvests will keep things busy in the country for a long time yet.

Lausanne Hall is abandoned. This turns another bunch of house hunters loose. The fact is, the favorite outdoor sport in Salem is and is going to be house hunting.

The man who can solve the house question in Salem will deserve more than a leather medal.

The men who are building the paper mill will begin to make a showing from now on. They have been going down into the earth to get bedrock. They will now begin to build up from the bedrock.

James Elvin will help to make the local Y.M.C.A. an organization that Salem will be proud of.

As said before, several times, the making of the local building and loan association about ten times as large as it is now will solve the house question for Salem.

The federal inheritance tax to be paid by the Henry L. Pitcock estate will probably be $1,040,000 and the state inheritance tax about $240,000. The gross value of the estate is estimated to be $7,894,773.33, and the indebtedness $999,076.99. Mr. Pitcock was the chief owner of the Portland Oregonian. He left the largest estate of any Oregon man up to date.

Not everybody is to blame for all the faults laid on his shoulders. Ananias may have been an eminently truthful gentleman who suffered from having been misquoted by a too ardent reporter.—Stars and Stripes.

Noticed a pretty girl giving herself the "once over" in a big plate-glass window yesterday and honest-to-goodness we didn't blame her a bit. In fact, if we were a tenth as attractive probably it would take a policeman to move us away from those fine mirrors.—Jacksonville Times.

Some Connecticut chump is about to enrage the people of that state by recalling that roe had been once obtained for 20 cents each, instead of $2.50, as now. A man who would recall such things in a time like this ought to be put in stocks.—Houston Post.

Early Morning Fire Puts Scientist Church in Danger

Only through the alertness of Patrolman Victor was a disastrous fire averted at 4 o'clock Saturday morning when he discovered the blaze and promptly turned in an alarm at that hour. The fire was located at the head of the basement stairs at the First Church of Christ Scientist at 440 Chemeketa street.

head of the basement stairs after some renovating work had been completed a few days before. The blaze melted a nearby window which made it plainly visible to the passing patrolman and it also put the church lighting system out of commission by melting part of the main switch. The fire department responded promptly and quickly extinguished the flames by the use of the chemical engine and the damage is slight.
